VERBAL PITFALLS.

Traps That Await English Speaking Tourists In Portugal.

THERE ARE NO TOES THERE.

But, Then, One Has Twenty Fingers to Make Up the Loss, Fingers of the Hand and Fingers of the Foot—Oddities of the Verb "to Walk."

The Englishman or American in Portugal who thinks in his own language and tries to speak in the language of the country he is visiting is a great smile producer.

For instance, you never marry anybody in Portugal unless—strange paradox—you happen to be a priest. You marry "with" your beloved Maria, and the priest marries you both. In the same way you never dream about anybody, but always "with" them.

When the landlady at your boarding house is lading out your soup you call out, "Arrive." You are telling her to arrive at the stopping point—in other words, that you don't want more than she has put out. When you see a child that you want to fondle at the other side of the room you say to her, "Arrive here." And the child promptly "arrives."

In England when we speak of walking we refer to a certain use of the legs. But the Portuguese verb "to walk" has many more significations. In Portugal not only do the people walk, but also the carts and cars walk, the trains walk, a balloon walks, and a boat walks. Stranger still, the hands of a clock walk round the face! A clock, by the way, never goes; it "works."

Unless you are very intimate or very rude you never say to your fair partner at dinner, "Will you have some bread?" etc. You inquire, "Will your excellency have some bread?" or, "Will the lady have some bread?" the "lady" meaning not some other lady, but your fair partner herself.

In spite of winter you are never cold in Portugal unless you are a corpse. You are "with" cold. In the same way you are occasionally "with" heat, "with" headache, "with" hunger or "with" thirst. When you have occasion to discuss the weather you say, "It 'makes' cold." "It 'makes' fog," etc. On your way home from an entertainment you tell your companion that it "makes" dark.

If speaking of her husband a wife says he is a "tame" man. She merely means that he is a man of peace and justice.

The word "house" means more than with us. Your buttons share your own privilege of living in a house. The buttonholes are called "houses of the buttons." The squares on a chess-board are also "houses." You don't say, "I'm going to shave." You say, "I'm going to 'do' the beard." Neither do you say on the way to the barber's, "I'm going to get my hair cut," but you say, "I'm going to cut my

HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society was held in the Historical Hall on Friday evening January 27th. About seventy citizens braved the almost impossible walking and were well repaid for the effort they made.

The President opened the meeting and introduced Prof. O. D. Skelton, of Queen's University, Kingston, who delivered a most interesting and instructive lecture on "The Referendum."

Prof. Skelton gave a short history of the Referendum as it has been developed through the ages, and explained the attitude which the people of all countries have adopted in dealing with it. After treating the subject historically, he spoke of the countries which now use the referendum and explained that Switzerland and the United States of America were the only two of which it could be said that the referendum was a regular institution.

He carefully explained the advantages to be gained by the use of it, and then explained how it has worked in the countries above mentioned. After covering this ground thoroughly, he gave several reasons why it was not considered the best system to adopt. In this part of his lecture he was not particularly clear, and by means of many illustrations, he convinced his hearers that there was just as strong reasons for not adopting it in Canada for general use, as there were strong reasons why an occasional referendum on certain important legislation was a good, wise thing to have.

He referred to the effect of the referendum when applied to joint stock companies, and gave striking examples of its use.

The entire subject was handled in an able manner, and Society has added another to its already long list of most entertaining programmes.

After the lecture the President thanked Prof Skelton on behalf of the Society and of the people of the country for his kindness in coming to Napanee. He then announced that the next regular meeting would be held on Friday evening February 17th., when Mr. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Toronto, would lecture, the subject to be announced later. Mr. James addressed the Society in March 1908, when he gave a most interesting address. The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

privilege of living in a house. The buttonholes are called "houses of the buttons." The squares on a chess-board are also "houses." You don't say, "I'm going to shave." You say, "I'm going to 'do' the beard." Neither do you say on the way to the barber's, "I'm going to get my hair cut," but you say, "I'm going to cut my hair."

When you are in Portugal you have twenty fingers, but no toes. If you want to make a distinction you say "fingers of the hand" or "fingers of the foot." Instead of telling the servant to set the table you tell her to "put" it. When you go to the theater you "assist." You don't mean by that that you "come on" nor even that you do a little scene shifting. You mean that you are there.

Residents in flats who meditate taking a holiday in Portugal will be relieved to hear that no one plays the piano there. They merely "touch" it. Neither do they ring bells. They "touch" them also. But they "play" stones, meaning that they throw them, and a ship at sea "plays" when it pitches and tosses.

Be careful how you tell your landlady that you intend to dine out or she may think, with a shrug of the shoulders, that you intend dining "outside"—i. e., in the garden. In answer to the kind inquiries of your friends don't say that you are well; say that you are "good." Be careful in your use of words. Some words similar in form are widely different in meaning, as an American missionary once discovered to his cost when preaching in Brazil, once a Portuguese colony. His subject was "The Prodigal Son," and he gravely informed his hearers that when the young man returned home his father killed for him the fatted beetle! But he had merely made a mistake in one solitary vowel.

A "sleeping" bridge means a bridge that is immovable (not a drawbridge). Stagnant water also "sleeps." So do trucks or trains that wait anywhere during the night. When they laugh in Portugal they "untie themselves to laugh," and when they cry they "unmake themselves in tears." A persistently unfortunate man says, "I am so unlucky that if I fell on my back I should break my nose!"—London Answers.

Hopeful Names.

Two bright looking colored boys about seven years of age laughingly accosted a lawyer on the street. The man stopped and asked the boys their names.

"Johnsing," was the reply. "We're twins."

"Well, what are your first names?" insisted the amused questioner.

"Mah name," answered one, "is Soda, and his name," pointing to the other, "is Saleratus. Maw done lose all de others, and she give us names she find successful in raisin'."—Newark Star.

Quarterly meeting was held in the White church on Sunday and was quite largely attended.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Garrison were taken by surprise, on Saturday, when their family gathered to spend the evening with them; the occasion being the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. The event brought back many sweet and fond recollections of the past, mingled with the sad. Mr. and Mrs. Garrison are getting well up in years, and are quite active yet, but they have not been able to be out much this winter, owing to the fact that they both met with an accident, Mr. Garrison spraining his ankle and Mrs. Garrison also suffering a fall. They have been residents of this place for over forty years. They are now living on the old homestead and the gathering on Saturday was a happy one to them. After partaking of the good things provided and doing ample justice to the bride's wedding cake the company broke up, all wishing Mr. and Mrs. Garrison many more years of good health and happiness.

Church of St. Mary Magdalene.

The Parish Church of St. Mary Magdalene was re-opened on Sunday, January 22nd, after having been closed for the purpose of repair and decoration for several weeks.

The opening services were conducted in the morning by the Very Venerable Dean Bidwell, Dean of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, assisted by the Venerable Archdeacon Carey, a native of Napanee. The services in the morning consisted of short morning prayer and the celebration of the Holy Eucharist.

For the first time, the handsome memorial cross, presented by Mr. E. R. Checkley and his sister, in memory of his father, Rev. Mr. Checkley and his mother, was used to head the procession of the choir, who sang as a Processional the very appropriate hymn referring to the cross "Brightly Gleams our Banner" and a special Te Deum was sung during the service, being a Te Deum in D by R. Smart.

An eloquent and impressive sermon teaching the duty of worship was preached by the Dean. Woodward's choral communion service was effectively sung by the choir as was the recessional hymn "The son of God goes forth to War." The auxiliary choir of ladies was, for the first time, vested and the general impression was that it was a great improvement upon the former display of the variety of colors. The vestments consisted of the usual surplice and the becoming college cap.

The Dean referred to the beautiful interior of the church and made a statement, which, no doubt, is true, that it is one of the handsomest decorated churches in the Province of Ontario.

The peculiar feature of the decorations is the large number of memorials which form part of it. The bell, which calls the people to worship, is in memory of Miss P. S. Harding, through whose generosity the bell was donated and the tower of the church finished. The twelve bracket lights in brass along the sides of the nave are each a separate memorial to some former parishioner, whose memory is still green among the worshippers in the church. The handsome brass rail and standards consist of three other memorials, the brass lectern and handsome pulpit are also in memory of prominent church people. The altar rail is in memory of Venerable Archdeacon Bedford-Jones, whose services in Napanee were so effective and highly appreciated, while Rector of this parish. The handsome standards on the Gospel and Epistle side of the altar and the altar cross are three more memorials and when we consider the stained glass windows, the church was well described by Archdeacon Carey as a Modern Westminster Abbey and it was with a feeling of pride and thanksgiving that the congregation on Sunday morning opened their church, which marked a new epoch in the history of the Parish.

The Baptismal Font and the east windows are memorials of John Solomon Cartwright, through whose generosity the old Church of St. Mary Magdalene was built in Napanee and a large portion of the material of the old church was used in the construction of the new building so that the new church is merely an enlargement and improvement of the old edifice.

The interior mural decorations are done in oil and is a study or color scheme of a beautiful light green brightened with gold effect. The medallions on the side walls were chosen by the late Vicar, Rural Dean Dibb, typifying the articles of the Creed.

The work of the chancel is particularly effective in gold colors and above the east windows is a special canvas painting of the angelic hosts representing the herald angels proclaiming the Nativity beneath which, over the arch of the centre window, is the text "Gloria in Excelsis Deo" Dean

At Montreal, Otto Kirkland, a fifteen-year-old boy, was run over by an engine at Blue Bonnets, and had both his legs cut off, dying later. The boy's father was killed by a train two years ago.

"For every victim of typhoid fever in Ottawa," says Dr. Hodgetts, "an alderman should be shot." The municipal authorities at Ottawa must shoulder the responsibility for the apparent epidemic.

John McSorley, Cayuga, Ont., pleaded guilty to body-snatching, and was sentenced to five years in the Kingston penitentiary. The body he took from the grave was found in a barrel at Montreal.

The worst storm experienced in thirty years, railwaymen say, has been raging in Quebec along the Intercolonial line, and trains are stalled in snow banks around St. Flavie, traffic at that point being practically blocked.

After brief proceedings a special jury before Lord Chief Justice Alverstone cleared King George of imputations against his personal character, by finding Edward F. Mylius guilty of circulating a libel. Mylius was sentenced to one year's imprisonment.

Members of the legislature approve the amendment proposed to the public school act by which the summer vacation in rural schools will be extended two weeks so as to correspond to that of the city and town schools.

During the past ten months the revenue of Canada has gained ten million dollars. During the first ten months of this year the customs revenue has totalled $58,008,307, which exceeds the record of the previous similar period by $10,001,194. During the month of January alone the customs revenue amounted to $5,583,822, which is an increase of $1,243,890.

Because his lubricating oil ran out and his engines got hot, J. A. D. McCurdy, the Canadian aviator, failed to fly from Key West to Havana, Cuba on Monday the small margin of only ten miles. He alighted in the gulf and was picked up five minutes later by one of the American Torpedo boats which lined the route. McCurdy is a simon pure Canadian and broke all records for flights over water. His speed was about sixty miles an hour.

The result of the Public School system of training the children in case of fire was shown at a Toronto School on Monday when the chimney caught fire. Smoke was seen backing up the chimney into the kindergarten classroom. The alarm was rung in and 500 children marched out in perfect order, even taking time to put on their overcoats. The fire department extinguished the blaze, finding the chimney choked with soot, the result of burning wood.

Excitement was caused in Gananoque on Monday morning. After Charles Botton and John Bedard had opened the gates to allow the water to run into the canal furnishing power for a number of factories, a workman noticed a human hand under the platform, before Mitchell & Wilson's factory. The boards were at once pried up and there on the stone wall was found a girl about fourteen years of age nearly perished. With the water in the canal she could not get from the wall without getting into the water. Medical aid was at once was at once brought and restoratives given. It was ascertained that she had concealed herself there on Sunday morning, remaining all day and night. The girl is said to have played such pranks before. She is from an orphanage and is in the employment of a well-known resident of Gananoque, from whom she has always received kind treatment. She is recovering.

For Lice on Cattle.

Don't waste money on expensive and unsatisfactory Louse Powders. We are confident that we can give you something that will do the work without expense, trouble, or injury to the animal, at The Medical Hall—Fred L. Hooper.

The incense on the side walls were chosen by the late Vicar, Rural Dean Dibb, typifying the articles of the Creed.

The work of the chancel is particularly effective in gold colors and above the east windows is a special canvas painting of the angelic hosts representing the herald angels proclaiming the Nativity beneath which, over the arch of the centre window, is the text "Gloria in Excelsis Deo." Over the arch of the chancel is a large illuminated cross of gold, which immediately strikes the eye on entering the church, which is one of the most beautiful effects of the whole decoration.

At the evening service, the church was crowded with an interested congregation. The Lord Bishop of the Diocese was present and assisted by Archdeacon Carey conducted evensong. Special music was arranged for this service, the main feature of which appointed to the Epiphanytide season and the carol "We three Kings of the Orient" was effectively sung by the choir, the solos being taken exceedingly well by the three smallest boys in the choir, Roy Johnston, Keppel Hill and Fred Tomlinson.

At the Offertory a quartette "Brightest and Best of the Sons of the Morning" was sung by Misses Herring, Furnival and Light and Mrs. Herrington.

The Bishop gave one of his eloquent and powerful sermons complimenting the congregation on the success of their efforts and expressing the hope that Napanee, which he considered one of the best parishes in the Diocese, would soon have a satisfactory Vicar installed in the place of the late lamented Rural Dean.

Throughout the day, however, there was a minor chord of sadness felt by every person arising from the terrible calamity in the death of Rural Dean Dibb, who was not, in the Providence of God, permitted to live to see the consummation of the work of improvement, to which he was so devotedly interested.

Before the commencement of the evening service the Lord Bishop consecrated the new processional cross, which is perhaps the handsomest in Ontario.

Since all this work and improvement of the church have been accomplished without the congregation being burdened with any extra debt, the members of the Anglican Church can well congratulate themselves and feel proud of the result of their labors. This beautiful church is now not only a source of gratification of the worshippers therein but is a gem in the way of church architecture, which every citizen of this beautiful town of Napanee should feel proud to have in our midst.

The weather man is certainly a busy fellow these days, handing out all kinds of weather. There has been sleet, rain and snow within the past few days, and on Wednesday evening and Thursday he interspersed his selections with high winds and a small sized blizzard. But, why find fault, spring will soon be here, and then you will be glad you are alive.

FOUR DAYS ON SINKING SHIP

Nova Scotian Sailors Pass Through a Terrible Experience.

A despatch from Boston, Mass., Jan. 25, says: Their gaunt faces and emaciated bodies testifying to the horrors through which they had passed while clinging to their sinking ship for four days and subsisting on nearly raw meat and condensed milk, the six men of the British schooner Helen Shafner, were brought into port on Wednesday night aboard the fishing schooner Josie and Phoebe. Capt. Larry Norris, of the fishing schooner, picked up the men about 40 miles west of Seal Island, off the Nova Scotia coast, Friday. The rescued were Capt. Isaac A. Hopkins of Halifax, Mate Wm. Green, Cook George Harpel, Seaman Stephen Verge, Wm. McGrath and Bruce Austin.

Capt. Hopkins said he left Port Hastings, N.S., early in January with 190,000 feet of lumber for this city. Severe weather forced the vessel into port at Shelburne, N.S. One day out of port the schooner sprang a leak in a heavy gale, and went over on her beam ends, when it became necessary to cut away both masts. For four days the men lived on condensed milk and meat heated by being held over a blazing can of paint. After they were rescued the wreck was fired to prevent her from becoming a menace to navigation.

The Helen Shafner was a two-masted schooner of 180 tons net, and was owned principally by A. W. Girvoir, of Annapolis, N.S.

BANK INSPECTION.

Traders Bank at Annual Meeting Favor Government Inspection.

At the 26th annual meeting of the Traders Bank in Toronto, January 24th, the following resolution was passed:—

It was moved by E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., director, seconded by Mr. J. S. Williamson, shareholder, and resolved:

"That the shareholders and directors of the Traders Bank of Canada place on record their hearty approval of any legislation of the Dominion Parliament whereby an independent examination and audit under the direction of the Government of all Canadian Banks shall be made from time to time;

Resolved, also, that whilst the system of auditing should be determined by the Government, it is hoped that in the public interest, the method to be devised will be thorough and efficient, and of a practical character, as the result of a defective system would create injustice and tend to injure those who might be induced to rely on reports having the sanction of a Government or other official auditor.

That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Hon. the Minister mation concerning the Traders Bank, it contains a large amount of valuable Canadian information of a general kind and will be found very useful as a work of reference. Send your enquiry to the Head Office, Toronto.

EXPLOSION AND PANICS.

Two Women Killed and Many Slightly Injured.

A despatch from Philadelphia says: In an explosion of a large tank containing ammonia in the Locust Laundry at Ninth and Locust streets here on Wednesday, two women were killed, 150 to 200 girls were slightly injured, and 250 other employees, mostly young women, were thrown into a wild panic. Fortunately fire did not follow the explosion. Annie Hall, an elderly employee, who was killed, was near the tank on the first floor when it exploded, and blown through a window into the street. Lizzie McGuigan, twenty-five years old, died in the hospital in the afternoon.

THE RECIPROCITY TREATY

Live Stock, Fish, Fruit and Farm Produce on Free List—Cement, Coal, Autos, Agricultural Implements Reduced.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Before giving in detail the basis of the arrangement the Hon. Mr. Fielding, Finance Minister, on Thursday afternoon, asked those who had evinced opposition to the reciprocity negotiations to give the results fair consideration. "I am persuaded," said he, "that the gentlemen who on the public platform or in the press took such strong ground against our action did not give us the benefit of their well-considered judgment. I appeal to them to revise that judgment." The character of the agreement and its wide scope may be adequately appreciated when it is stated that the reduction in taxation effected amounts to $2,250,000. Large concessions are given by the United States. They provide for reciprocal free trade in wheat, barley, oats, hay, vegetables, dairy products, live animals, coke, fruits, eggs and poultry—these being of the utmost importance to the agricultural classes, who will benefit to the extent of millions of dollars annually. The duty on agricultural implements, such as harvesters and mowers, is lowered two and a half per cent., the present duty of seventeen and a half per cent. ad valorem being reduced to fifteen per cent. ad valorem, while on plows, thrashers and other classes of agricultural implements a reduction is made of five per cent.—namely, from twenty per cent. ad valorem to fifteen per cent. ad valorem. On farm waggons the duty is reduced from twenty-five per cent. ad valorem to twenty-two and a half per cent. ad valorem, and reductions are made on other items of special interest to farmers.

There is a reduction of eight cents per ton on bituminous coal. None of these concessions should excite serious opposition from the manufacturers of the country.

An important concession is that of free fish and free coke, which should prove of immense value to the Maritime and Pacific Provinces. It is further provided that sawn lumber will be admitted free to the United States, and an important feature of the arrangement is that pulp and paper will be placed in a similar position if the Provinces of the Dominion can see their way to withdraw their export restrictions on pulpwood.

MR. BORDEN'S VIEWS.

R. L. Borden said this question was one of the deepest moment to Canada, being practically a proposal for a new Canadian tariff. The agreement would affect many industries and trades, and especially the smaller trades of Canada. It would dislocate trade greatly, but no man could now say how far this dislocation might proceed. The finance minister had spoken of the importance of cultivating trade with the hundred million products. Among the items on which the tariff duties are to be swept away entirely are cattle, horses and mules, swine, sheep and lambs, poultry dead and alive, wheat, rice oats, barley, buckwheat, beans, dried peas, potatoes, butter, cheese, milk, cream, eggs, honey, fresh and salted fish, vegetables, fresh fruit and several varieties of dried fruits. This means in effect, if Congress accepts the view of President Taft and his advisers, that the United States definitely abandons the policy of protecting the food producers of that country, leaving the doors open to Canada, the only country from which foods of the sort mentioned can be obtained to supplement the home supply. In meats of various sorts, although the duties are not entirely removed, there are very material reductions, while flour will bear a duty of 50 cents per barrel on both sides of the line, and oatmeal 50 cents per 100 pounds.

Among the miscellaneous articles of importance other than foodstuffs on which duties are entirely removed by both countries are hay, lumber, coke, certain classes of steel rods, typesetting and type-casting machines, cottonseed oil, railroad ties, telegraph poles, wooden staves, pickets and palings.

Considerable reductions are made in the agricultural implement schedule, a uniform scale of duties on both sides having been arranged. Among the more important reductions in the Canadian duties are farm waggons, harvesters and mowers, 22 per cent.; plows, harrows, drills, horse rakes, cultivators, thrashing machines, hay-loaders, patent augers, feed-cutters, grain-crushers, fanning mills, hay-tedders and farm or field rollers, 5 per cent. reduction.

There is a lengthy list of reductions on various products of the mine, the most important being a decrease on the Canadian duty on bituminous coal from 53 to 45 cents per ton. The revenue loss from this will be large, over eight million tons of bituminous coal having been imported last year. This would mean about $640,000 in reduced duties on coal. The people of Ontario now pay most of the soft coal duties.

ENGLISH OPINION.

A despatch from London says: Speaking on Friday on the reciprocity agreement just made between Canada and the United States, Viscount Milner, former high commissioner for South Africa, said: "Nothing one says can make things better. It is idle to shut our eyes to the fact that the proposed treaty, like that already concluded with France, must tend to diminish British preference, and is, to that extent, detrimental to the policy of closer union."

The editorials in the London newspapers dealing with the proposed reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada are

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Will Become Governor-General of Canada in September.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Government has been notified of the appointment of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught to succeed Earl Grey as Governor-General of Canada. The announcement was made in a cable received on Saturday by his Excellency from the Colonial Secretary. It is further announced that H.R.H. will arrive in Canada to assume office in September next, and that the term of office is to be two years, with the possibility of extension. His Royal Highness will be accompanied by H.R.H. the Duchess of Connaught. The announcement was received with approval by members of Parliament, irrespective of party. It is believed that the appointment coming at this time will do much to promote the unity of the Empire.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE; OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER IV.

Derrick Darnley had been abroad ever since March. Neither Dorothy, Lord Merefield nor Sir Humphrey had the smallest idea where, but by long custom they were never surprised at anything he did; and when they were all out on the lawn having tea in the afternoon, and the omnibus from Ripstone disgorged the guests, no one—except Nancy—was at all astonished to see Mr. Darnley's tall, well-built form saunter across the lawn, chatting lightly to Mrs. Fairfax, also newly arrived.

Dorothy was supremely delighted at his coming, and showed it. Nancy, too, was strangely pleased, though why, she hardly knew herself, but her face wore nothing but the ordinary smile and expression of everyday greeting.

Lord Merefield looked rather glum; lovers' senses are keen, and he knew that Dorothy Leicester thought far more of Darnley than she did of himself.

Sir Humphrey was loud in his demonstrations of pleasure at welcoming his sister's son back to the Hall.

"Here is some one you know, Derry," he said, turning to Nancy. "How d'ye do?" inquired Mr. Darnley, leisurely.

And after he had shaken Miss Hamilton's hand, he dropped into a chair and commenced talking busily to Dorothy.

"A cup of tea for Derry, Nancy, darling," cried Dolly.

Nancy bent over the tray. She felt disappointed and angry.

Disappointed at Mr. Darnley's cold manner, and angry with herself for being disappointed.

What did it matter to her what he said or how he looked?

Dorothy's eyes were glowing, her pretty cheeks were flushed with delight, and she hung on her cousin's every word; while he in his turn had nothing to do with it. Crawshaw has only just come into his money, by the merest fluke; he has literally had no hand in amassing it.

"Oh! tell us all about it, Darnley!"

Mr. Darnley smiled at Dorothy, but his eyes still lingered on Nancy at the tea table.

"Once upon a time," he began, in the most approved fashion, "there was a publican in the East End of London, who married a wife; in due course of time flourished, bought another public house, still another, and then another; in fact, developed into a purveying publican, if I can use such a word; then he died, leaving his widow childless, and worth at least twenty-five to thirty thousand a year. This widow happened to have had a sister, long since dead, and it was to the son of this sister that Mrs. Crawshaw resolved to bequeath all her fortune. She placed the matter in the hands of a good firm of solicitors; her nephew was sought for, was found, and behold him now the temporary owner of the manor, and the friend of that most delightful being, Lady Lorrimor."

There was a supreme touch of sarcasm in Mr. Darnley's voice at the last; but Lady Burton did not seem to notice it.

"Ah!" she said, blandly; "brewers are quite the rage just now. Look at Sir Mulberry Hopkins! No doubt Mr. Crawshaw will be knighted before the year is out."

Darnley's eyes met Nancy's, and they both smiled; both, for some indefinite reason, felt pleased the next moment; but they had no chance of becoming more friendly then, for the dressing gong sounded, and there was a general dispersing of the party to the house.

CHAPTER V.

REMEMBER PISO'S for COUGHS & COLDS

"I have thought about you so often," he said, after a while.

"Of me!" Nancy exclaimed, just lifting those blue eyes of hers, and then dropping them again. "How—how funny!"

"Wasn't it?" very dryly. "I wonder if you have ever bestowed a single thought on me?"

"Dorothy is always talking of you," Nancy replied, evasively; "and, of course, I—"

The broken sentence was most eloquent to the man. He looked as if he would say more, and then he checked himself.

"I met some relations of yours in Paris the other day," he said, instead.

Nancy turned a puzzled face toward him.

"Sir John Hamilton and his family."

She grew a shade paler.

"You have made a mistake; they are not my relations, Mr. Darnley; nor do I desire to claim them as such."

"Are you so proud and unforgetting, Nancy?"

"I don't know. But I cannot forget that they disowned both my mother and myself. You did not tell them I—"

"Do you think I—I mean we—are in such a hurry to lose you?"

She looked at him questioningly.

"Of course they would want you to leave us."

"And you think I would go?" she asked, with quiet reproach.

Darnley drew a shade closer.

"I don't know what I think. I only know what I wish, Nancy."

"Here comes Dolly!" Nancy cried, hurriedly.

With deeply flushed cheeks she rose to her feet, accidentally kicking her basket over as she did so.

"With the two cubs," Darnley observed, lazily, pulling himself into a sitting position, so as to pick up the scattered roses, and wishing vaguely that he could banish everybody and everything from the world except this girl, with her wondrous eyes and splendid face. It was a face to die for, he too himself in that moment, he had never met its equal.

"Please don't bother, Mr. Darnley," Nancy said, hurriedly, her cheeks still glowing, like the innermost heart of the exquisite flowers she was engaged in replacing in their basket; "you look so comfortable, and I can manage quite easily;" then, with a shy, nervous laugh, as if she were eager to get on to another topic; "Why do you call them cubs? It is very rude; they look very nice from here."

"Yes, from here," Mr. Darnley agreed, languidly; then he shivered with mock dismay. "Heavens! do listen to their voices. What lungs! what chest notes! Nancy, you are not going!"

"I must set the flowers, and—"

But before she got any further Dorothy came round the corner with a Miss Chester hanging affectionately on either arm.

Miss Leicester's lovely face flushed as she beheld her cousin, and then she smiled in response to his comical glance.

"Don't go, Nancy," she said, af-stockings and the old coat and waistcoat, which, as they lay where the new ones ought to have been, came most naturally to hand.

A greatcoat over all concealed the mischief from John, and away he set out, and arrived a little before dinner.

He happened to know Johnson, Lord Stamford's butler, an old and valued servant. As he stopped in the hall to take off his greatcoat, Johnson, having looked hard at his elbows, said:

"You have a large hole, sir, in your elbow, and the white lining is visible."

"Indeed!" said my father. "How can that be? Let me consider." After some reflection he made out the truth as it really had happened.

"Well, sir," said Johnson, "come to my room and we will see what can be done." So he took my father into his own precincts, brushed him, inked his elbow, and put him into better order than had at first seemed possible, and when all was complete, he said:

"Now, sir, go into the drawing-room, set a good face on the matter, and my life for it, not a lady or gentleman will find you out."

My father promised to be vastly prudent, and as he was always equally at home in every company, he was not in the least disturbed by the consciousness of his old clothes and inked elbows.

But when dinner was nearly over, he turned toward the butler and said, "Johnson, it must not be lost." The man frowned and shook his head, but all in vain. "It is much too good, Johnson. Though you are ever so angry with me, I must tell it."

Then came the whole story, to the great delight of the noble party present, and to the lasting gratification of my father himself, for he never failed to be highly pleased when he could tell the story, and spoke of the scolding he got before he came away from the honest butler, whose punctilio he had most barbarously wounded.

A "RHINO" CONCERT.

Held in the Depth of the African Wilderness.

The rhinoceros, although he may vocalize without much art or refinement, at least performs with an energy and abandon which would please those music-lovers who enjoy so boisterously the frantic bellowings of the true tenor robusto. Lieutenant-Colonel Patterson, after travelling through the African wilderness, wrote a book about his trip, entitled "In the Grip of the Nyika." In it he tells how he was once awakened from sleep at midnight by a most terrific din coming from the direction of a water-hole some two hundred yards away. He decided to see what the disturbance was about.

We stalked cautiously and carefully among the rocks, with the wind in our favor, until at last we were able to look over the edge of a crag down into a ravine at our feet.

The weirdest sight I ever expect to see suddenly unfolded itself beneath my astonished gaze. No fewer than sixteen rhinos were gathered together, close by, all roaring at each other, and struggling and fighting in their efforts

What did it matter to her what he said or how he looked?

Dorothy's eyes were glowing, her pretty cheeks were flushed with delight, and she hung on her cousin's every word, while he in his turn was feasting his eyes on that girlish form by the tea table.

"She is magnificent," he said to himself. "She eclipses Dorothy with all her dainty loveliness. I would far sooner look at that irregular face with those wonderful eyes, that colored hair, than at the most perfect features possible. How these few months have changed her!"

His admiration was universally shared, more, perhaps, by the men guests than the women.

There was a dangerous attraction about the pretenses of Sir Hamond, the fair sex, before that one, and with great determination.

As the conversation became general, the name of Mr. Crawshaw, the new tenant of the manor, arose.

"Can you tell us anything about him, Mrs. Fairfax?" asked Dorothy, still sitting by Darnley's side.

"I met him only the other day. The man is a bore."

But we must make allowances for him," interposed Lady Burton. She had two unmarried daughters, who were to follow next day, and so she spoke diplomatically. "Dear Lady Leinster met him in Paris the other day and thought him most original."

Darnley's lip curled, and Dorothy noticed this at once.

"Do you know him, Darnley?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied, quietly. "I know him. I, too, had the misfortune to meet him in Paris. The fellow is a low, vulgar brute. He comes from the gutter. Even his thousands—and he has many thousands! my pretty cousin—will never be able to get him, or make his society palatable for an hour."

"He made his money with patent pills, didn't he?"

This from Lord Merefield, in a gloomy tone.

"No, varnish," from Capt. Fairfax.

"I heard, from dear Lady Leinster, that it was not in trade at all."

"Quite right, Lady Burton; trade

next moment, but they had no chance of becoming more friendly than, for the dressing gong sounded, and there was a general dispersing of the party to the house.

CHAPTER V.

On the following day the Hon. Ella and Maude Chester, daughters of the Lady Burton, arrived at the Hall.

They were two good natured, plain girls, with any amount of freckles, lung power and healthy vigor. They had a reckless habit of pouncing on their unwary friends, and submitting them to a rough and hearty embrace.

Nancy was in the garden, calling flowers, when they arrived, so she missed the sight of Dorothy being enveloped in this bearlike hug.

She was humming to herself a little French song she had just learned, and was sauntering away from the house, when she came upon Derrick Darnley, in a cool and comfortable array, lying full length on a grass plot, smoking like a furnace.

Nancy colored and hesitated; but seeing that his eyes were closed, she resolved to steal past and leave him undisturbed.

As she put this resolve into action, however, the handsome gray eyes opened to their fullest.

"May I not have a rose, Miss Nancy?"

She turned.

"Twenty, if you will."

She threw him a cluster as she spoke.

"Ah!" sighed Mr. Darnley, inhaling the sweet perfume. "How delicious! Oh, by Jove!"

"What is it?" asked Nancy.

"Only a thorn—a very spiteful one."

"Let me look," she said, dropping her basket, and kneeling down beside him. "Remember I am a nurse, and know all about these things."

The young man relinquished his well-shaped hand to her soft fingers, and Nancy examined it carefully.

"Where does it hurt you?" she asked.

"Nowhere, now," was his answer, given quietly.

Nancy blushed, but still bent her head over the hand.

"I don't see any scratch."

"And I don't feel one," confessed Mr. Darnley, coolly. "It was an artifice to lure you to sit here. I knew I had only to rouse your womanly sympathy, and I should get my way."

Nancy dropped his hand, and would have risen, but his fingers closed on her wrist, and he drew her gently on to the grass again.

"Don't go," he said, pleadingly. "I want to talk to you. I want to know all about yourself. If you repent your promise to me? If you are happy?"

"Happy? I never knew the real meaning of the word till now; my life is so beautiful!"

"I am so glad!"

Then there was a slight pause. "And you forgive me for those disgraceful words I said to Merefield before I—"

"I have forgotten all about them," she answered, truthfully.

There was another pause, and a longer, this time. Mr. Darnley had thrown away his cigarette, and pushed himself on his elbow, so that he could see into the girl's face.

Dorothy came round the corner with a Miss Chester hanging affectionately on either arm.

Miss Leicester's lovely face flushed as she beheld her cousin, and then she smiled in response to his comical glance.

"Don't go, Nancy," she said, affectionately; and then, after Darnley had greeted Lady Burton's daughters, Miss Leicester introduced her new friend and companion to them with an air of pride and love.

The Hon. Ella and Maude were by no means jealous girls, yet they could not prevent a distinct feeling of depression and disappointment from stealing into their breasts as they realized the full strength of Miss Hamilton's fascination.

Dorothy Leicester, single handed, was a formidable rival enough, but these two faces together would make things a hundredfold worse.

However, they shook Nancy's small hand in their vigorous manner, and as Lord Merefield came on attired in tennis garments, they forgot their momentary discomfiture in the prospects of an exciting and immediate game.

Nancy could not resist a hearty fit of laughter at poor Merefield's miserable face, as he saw his dainty lady love comfortably ensconced on the grass with Mr. Darnley, while he himself was forcibly carried away to the tennis court by the Misses Chester.

"Won't you come, Darnley?" he cried feebly, as he went; but his invitation was drowned in a chorus of "Oh, Capt. Fairfax is going to join us; come along!" and so, like a lamb to the slaughter, he was borne away.

IN SPITE OF JOHNSON.

Good Story of the Absent-Minded Doctor Butt.

Doctor Butt, a chaplain to King George III, and the father of Mrs. Sherwood, the author, was inclined to be absent-minded, but his family was constantly on the alert to protect him from annoyance, so that his carelessness was not generally known. In her diary Mrs. Sherwood gives a little anecdote in which Doctor Butt's lack of memory placed him in a position which his own quick sense of humor made enjoyable instead of absurd.

He was invited to dine at Lord Stamford's. It was the custom when he was going out to arrange his best suit on a sofa in his study, his linen and stockings being in a wardrobe in the same room.

He was very much engaged in some writing that day, but thinking that he would be quite prepared when apprized that John and the horses were ready, he laid down his pen at an early hour, dressed himself, and laid his old black suit in the place from which he had taken the new one.

Then, to make the best of his time, he sat down to write again, till admonished that the horses were waiting.

"Bless me," he said, "and I not dressed!" and he hurriedly put on fresh linen and another pair of silk a crag down into a ravine at our feet.

The weirdest sight I ever expect to see suddenly unfolded itself beneath my astonished gaze. No fewer than sixteen rhinos were gathered together, close by, all roaring at each other, and struggling and fighting in their efforts to get at the water-hole.

The moon was shedding a brilliant luster all round, and everything was peaceful except at this one spot, where pandemonium reigned. I stood perfectly fascinated, and from the rocks where I took up my position watched the ungainly brutes with the deepest interest for a couple of hours.

I was not more than ten yards from the nearest of them, and those farthest away were not thirty yards off, but they were so busily occupied with their own affairs that they remained quite unconscious of my proximity.

Two of them, especially, amused me very much. One, who was evidently a bully, took up his position steadily at the water-hole, and would not budge an inch. Then a second came and stood opposite to him, and proceeded to give him a piece of his mind. The bully, of course, answered back, and there they both stood for quite a long time, with their mouths wide open, roaring bad rhino language at each other for all they were worth.

The others, which were waiting for their turn to have a drink, joined in the discordant chorus from time to time.

I could easily have picked off half a dozen of them with my rifle, and some of them had very fine horns; but of course I had no intention whatever of molesting them. They were much more interesting alive than dead, and I never for a moment entertained the thought of disturbing their concert by firing my rifle.

FOUND QUICK CURE AFTER EIGHT YEARS

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS TRI- UMPH WHERE BELTS AND PLASTERS FAIL.

Moses Sherwood, a long sufferer from Backache, found permanent relief in one box of the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Poodiac, King's Co., N. B., Jan. 9 (Special).—After suffering for eight years, while all the time the remedy was right at hand, Mr. Moses Sherwood, a well known farmer living near here, tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and is now as well as ever he was in his life.

Mr. Sherwood's experience is similar to that of thousands of other natives of New Brunswick. "About eight years ago I hurt my back from lifting," he states. "I used liniments and plasters and wore a wide belt, but in two years my trouble had developed into Kidney disease."

"My back was so sore I could not lift any weight; when reading a Dodd's Almanac led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Before the first box was finished my backache was gone and I have never been troubled with it since."

Belts and plasters may give temporary relief in cases of Backache or Rheumatism, but the only way to cure them is to go to the seat of the trouble. Cure the Kidneys and the Backache or Rheumatism will disappear. Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure the Kidneys.

COALING BIG WAR SHIPS

HIS MAJESTY'S SAILORS DRESS ANY OLD WAY.

Every Man Takes His Position Just as If the Battleship was in Action.

Twilight has just given place to dawn as the grimy, blunt-nosed collier comes gingerly alongside. As she makes fast a motley crowd hurls itself aboard, swarming all over her, reaving whips and out-hauls, and flinging sacks and shovels into the holds.

Hardly two men are dressed alike, for on a "coal-ship" day the uniform regulations of his Majesty's fleet are relaxed—indeed, they are disregarded entirely—and the utmost latitude is allowed in the matter of dress.

The forecatermen and foretopmen, each under their own officers, attack the foremost holds of the collier, the maintopmen and quarterdeckmen the after-holds; while the donkey-engines have been hastily overhauled by stokers, with a view to getting the best possible work out of them.

EACH PART OF THE SHIP

has two whips for hoisting the bags of coal inbound, and they must keep them well supplied.

A bugle sounds the "Commence!" and as the first hoist—five sacks of coal, weighing 2 cwt. each—swings into the battleship a cheer goes up on deck. Down below in the bunkers are the men who have the least pleasant part of the work to do—stokers, who trim the coal as it comes in, working in enclosed spaces, in which the atmosphere is thick with the fine flying dust. Manipulating weird-looking rakes, and dodging the descending avalanches, they distribute them to the corners so as to get the bunker evenly and completely filled, and to keep a clear space beneath the shoot to prevent it from becoming choked.

Except for half an hour's interval for breakfast, and the same for dinner, the work

CONTINUES INCESSANTLY.

Every hour a midshipman chalks up the results on the sides of the hatchways, so that the shovellers in each hold can compare their efforts with those of their rival parts of the ship. The band plays lively airs on the shelter-deck, and nearly everyone smokes. Mess-kettles of lime-juice-and-water are passed down, and the seamen wash the coal-dust from their parched throats. All the officers who are not required for special duties shovel coal with their men, and the commander and first lieutenant are everywhere at once, full of encouragement, and dealing with any mishap that may occur. Perhaps towards the end speed decreases as the bunkers become congested, and the coal on the decks cannot be disposed of so quickly; but at last the bugle sounds "Cease firing!" and a mighty cheer goes up from the collier with the final hoist.—London Answers.

As soon as a group has five sacks filled, a hemp strop is passed through the becket at their mouths and one of the whips is hooked on. "Heave up, two!" yells a voice. An officer standing by the coaming of the hatch holds up a small flag. There is a rattle from the donkey-engine, and up goes the hoist, amidst shouts of "Stand from under!" as the men dodge the loose lumps of coal that fall from it. The hands on the hemp outhaul ease it away, and the hoist swings over the deck of the battleship. The officer, seizing the right moment, slaps the flag to his side, and down go the bags of coal on the deck, where a party of men spring on them to get them out of the way before the arrival of the next hoist.

DOWN AMONG THE DUST.

On board ship the Marines, each armed with an iron trolley, rush the full sacks one by one to the appointed coal-shoots. Here they are tipped up, and the coal pours down into the bunkers, while the empty bags are passed back to the collier to be refilled.

Bobby's father is not a brilliant sort of man; it has been said in fact, that he errs decidedly in the other direction.

He took Bobby the other day on a short visit to some friends, and, thinking to make a good impression, he started a conversation.

"I had quite an adventure the other evening," he said. "At the corner of a dark street a man suddenly sprang out on me, and said that if I didn't give him my watch he'd knock my brains out. Fortunately, a policeman came along, and the man took to his heels!"

"And weren't you afraid?" asked his hostess.

"Afraid?" echoed Bobby's papa modestly. "Well, I hope not."

"But," went on the lady, "if he had carried out his threat?"

"Well," answered the visitor, "if he had—" And then the loyal little Bobby struck in.

"I'll bet there's nobody who could knock any brains out of father!" he said proudly.

"Yes, Molly," was the reply. "Have you never seen macaroni cooked before?"

I had a box of Zam-Buk in my pocket, which I was using for a sore on my lip, and when I had recovered from the first shock of the accident, I produced the balm and had it applied freely to the scalded parts. I was suffering acute agony, but within a wonderfully short time Zam-Buk gave me ease. I was able to continue my journey and upon reaching home, I obtained more Zam-Buk and continued the treatment. Zam-Buk acted wonderfully well, and in a few days had the wound nicely healing. ## THE NEW TARIFF.

However the new tariff arrangements between Canada and the United States may be regarded by the special interests whose tariffs have been re-adjusted—whether the view be a friendly or an unfriendly one—it seems to The Standard that the opinion of the average layman will be that the readjustment will prove of decided benefit and advantage to Canada and must work this country infinite good. One thing is certain and that is that there has been no general sacrifice of Canadian interests such as in some quarters had apparently been dreaded. The rather, Canada appears to have gotten a little the better of the deal as a comparison of the reductions in the two tariffs will bear out—the greater reductions being made by the United States—and, indeed, as President Taft in his special message to Congress practically admits when he explains that if the Americans are to have friendly commercial relations with Canada, “an active, aggressive and intelligent people,” it will be necessary to meet Canada, quoting his own words, “in a spirit of real concession.”

And real concession by the United States there manifestly has been when we see such reductions by the United States of 70 cents on flour; of $1.25 on sawn lumber, of 25 cents on potatoes, of 25 cents on wheat and 80 cents on barley, as compared with much smaller reductions by Canada in the same list.

So far as the Canadian manufacturing interests are concerned there seems to be no occasion for complaint, as most reductions that have been made are minor ones—principally in agricultural implements and probably not even sufficiently large to satisfy the western farmers who have been crying for more. The interests who seem to have been actually hit are the millers; but it is reasonable to suppose that in due time they will adjust themselves to and meet the changed conditions. The fact is that every tariff change at the outset seems to threaten disaster to one or other interest; and yet in the end the predicted disaster does not come. And this probably—we hope, will in fact—be the case with the millers.

On the whole the new arrangement seems to be one that should prove beneficial and satisfactory to both sides—one that will help to perpetuate friendly relations between the two countries, to the sacrifice of the real interests of neither. For after all, trade is a bargain and wherever Canada can advantage herself by tariff arrangements—whether with the United States, France Germany or Great Britain—she certainly should do so. And in this particular case we think she has done so. Not only that, but she appears to have effectually safeguarded herself by not entering into any binding treaty but by effecting concurrent legislation which, as Mr. Fielding points out, may be changed by parliament at any time that it is thought necessary or wise.—Kingston Standard (Conservative).

READY FOR A JOKE.

The Customs Official Had a Sense of Humor Himself.

In the smoking room of the Hotel des Iles Britanniques at the lovely resort of Montone, on the French Riviera, some three years ago two Englishmen met. After half an hour's conversation the Englishman from Manchester said to his new acquaintance from London:

“I say, old fellow, would you mind taking a small parcel for me to Paris and have it sent to this address there? I'm leaving for Milan in the morning.”

The Londoner willingly consented to do this much for one of his countrymen.

“Awfully good of you. I'll have the boy take the parcel to your room in the morning,” acknowledged the Englishman bound for Milan.

In the morning the package was left at the other's room.

“So that is what he calls a small parcel,” he exclaimed. “And what might it contain? A package of such size the custom officers would certainly want opened. What—cigarettes and 3,000 of them! Is it possible that any one could have the audacity to ask such a favor—to smuggle 3,000 cigarettes into France! That chap shall pay for this, for I shall declare these cigarettes and leave them to be called for when the duty is paid.”

The Londoner left Montone that afternoon. The following day he was in Paris at the Gare d'Est, his luggage ready for examination.

“Anything dutiable?” asked the customs officer.

“Nothing,” replied the Englishman, “excepting in that parcel there.”

“What does it contain?”

“Three thousand cigarettes,” said the Londoner, with a smile upon his face—a smile of embarrassment at having such a parcel with him.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, solely owned and occupied by him or his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $400 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent and cultivate fifty acres extra).

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $200.00.

"excepting in that parcel there."
"What does it contain?"
"Three thousand cigarettes," said the Londoner, with a smile upon his face—a smile of embarrassment at having such a parcel with him.

The Frenchman raised his hands in the air and laughed heartily. He, too, was as ready for a good joke as any one, and on each piece of the Englishman's luggage went his O. K. cross.

Hardly realizing what had happened, the Londoner found himself riding in a taxicab along the streets of Paris with the parcel of 3,000 cigarettes under his arm and nothing left to do but to deliver it as he had been asked.

"I suppose you always prefer to enlist men who are not married?" I remarked to the sergeant who has charge of the recruiting station on Cannon street.

"No; you're mistaken there," he hastened to reply. "I prefer married men every time. You see, we don't have to go to the trouble of teaching married men to obey."—Chicago News.

Heartless Husband.

The Right Ring.
The Father—That young fellow who has been calling here lately is a very fine young man. He has the right ring about him. The Daughter (eagerly)—Has he? Have you seen it? Is it a diamond?

Pains That Make Misery.
A Talk with our Lady Readers.

Have you ever noticed how miserable and unhappy the little pains and aches make one? A stinging cut, badly chapped hands, a nasty burn, a sore foot, a poisoned finger—none of them wounds or ailments ever likely to cause serious trouble, which come to every woman—and man too—and are just sufficient to take the edge off one's temper and give one a "grouch."

Zam-Buk is just the thing at such times. As soon as you put it on a sore, a cut, a burn, or any skin injury, it stops the pain and the smarting, and starts up healing. Don't make the mistake that because Zam-Buk is so widely used by medical men, by nurses, and for serious skin diseases and accidents, that it is only for serious cases. Keep it handy and use it immediately you get some trivial injury or have some little sore.

Mrs. Chas. H. Barrett, Harmony Road Truro, N. S., says: "I had an ingrowing toe nail, which caused me acute agony. Sometimes the pain was so severe I could not sleep. It became so bad that I feared blood-poisoning had set in. I was advised to try Zam-Buk and bound up the sore toe with it. In a few days it was much easier, and I continued the treatment. The result is that to-day the toe is sound and I have no more trouble with it. We always keep Zam-Buk in our house, and I would strongly recommend it to every housewife."

Zam-Buk is just the thing, too for the little ones. Pure in its composition, and herbal in nature, it is suitable for the most delicate skin. It also cures piles, eczema, varicose ulcers, cold sores, abscesses, blood poisoning, ring-worm, and all similar skin diseases. Sold everywhere at 50c a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

Huntindon Gleaser.
Is it the banks that have brought into existence and are carrying manufacturing companies which depend for their profits on a protective tariff? Is it the banks that advance money to those who have a pull at Ottawa to secure concessions of land, water privileges, timber and coal limits? Where did the manipulators of the cotton and cement mergers get the needed money backing, and who is it that makes advances to bring about every other combine? Who are the responsible parties for the inflation that prevails among the mercantile class, and who will be to blame when the inevitable crash comes? If the bankers would only consider it, they would see the farmers by their present agitation are doing the Dominion a service, for by bringing back the affairs of the country to a natural instead of the present artificial basis they would secure to Canada permanent and sound prosperity. It is the farmers, not the high and mighty men who look down upon them, who are endeavoring to apply the brakes to avert a financial crisis.

Halifax Chronicle
With respect to the great concession for Nova Scotia which Mr. Fielding has been able to secure from the United States Government, namely, the opening of the American market to fish of all kinds, it goes without saying that this will be welcomed in all the great fishing centres of the Province. As our Lunenburg correspondent points out, it will revolutionize the fishing trade; it will mean the disposal of the catch at higher prices and consequently better profits, and the operation of a larger fleet of bank and shore fishermen. It will greatly stimulate the shipbuilding industry and, especially in connection with the shore fishing, will place the fisherman, particularly of the western shore of Nova Scotia in practical control of the New England market for fresh fish. No trade arrangement could be framed which could possibly be of greater advantage to the great fishing population of Nova Scotia than the agreement which Mr. Fielding has just concluded. It may well mark the beginning of a new era in the fishing industry of this Province.

How Ma Reminded Him.

"What's the difference?" replied the scene painter. "Nobody who goes to a musical comedy in New York knows what a sunrise looks like."—Washington Star.

BEAT THE BANK.

A French Naval Officer's Daring Expedient at Monte Carlo.

Those who have visited Monte Carlo have heard of if not seen the pitiful ruin of many an unfortunate person who has lost his last franc in playing at roulette in that palatial gambling den. All are so fortunate as to have an armored cruiser at their disposal, as was the case with a French naval officer some years ago. He had gone ashore in the morning with naught in his pockets but his own earnings. By noon it was all gone.

If he but had another 500 francs he was sure of winning. During those morning hours of failure he had worked out a system, and with just a few francs more success was certain. He would use the ship's money. Perhaps it was not just the right thing to do, but in another two hours he would be able to return it, would have recouped his own loss and have won who knows what fortune besides.

At sunset he returned to his ship a ruined man. The system, like all systems of the sort, had failed. What was to be done? To return home would mean a dishonorable discharge, lifelong disgrace, if not even more severe punishment. Death seemed the only alternative. But no; he would make one final attempt to save himself. He would force the authorities of Monte Carlo to return to him what he had lost or he would blow up their gambling palace!

DEADLY MINE GASES.

White Damp, Firedamp, Black Damp and the Fearful After Damp.

"White damp is the gas most feared by the miners, for its properties render it difficult to detect, inasmuch as it is tasteless, odorless and colorless and when mixed in the proportion of about one part gas to nine parts air is called "firedamp" and becomes explosive to a degree hard to realize unless one has seen its effects.

Black damp, unlike white damp, is heavier than air, a nonexplosive gas which may be detected by its peculiar odor. Again, unlike the other, its effect is to suffocate and extinguish fire. This gas is so heavy and moves with such a sluggish flow that occasionally, when miners have been trapped in a mine following an explosion and have detected the black damp creeping in upon them by its smell, they have been able to stop its advance by erecting dams or barricades along the floor, building them higher as the volume of gas increased and keeping the air within their little inclosure comparatively clean by rude improvised fans.

Following an explosion, these two gases become mingled and form a mixed gas, possessing all the dreaded qualities of each, which is known as "after damp," and it is the mixture of gases which destroys any life that may remain following a mine disaster. —Atlantic Monthly.

FEATS OF MARKSMANSHIP.

Wonderful Shooting of Captain Bogardus and Dr. Carver.

Old gentlemen of the period just after the war will tell you sadly that there are no such shots as there used to be. In this connection it is interesting to note that $1,000 was wagered against $100 that the champion of the world could not hit a hundred consecutive birds. Many amateurs, not to speak of professionals, frequently make such a score without arousing comment in these days. Captain Bogardus was to be allowed three trials. If he lost the first two and made the third the money was his, and, by the way, he used a twelve gauge, full choke, ten pound gun, and his load was five drams of black powder with No. 9 shot. He loaded his own shells or had them loaded according to his directions.

While shooting in England his load was challenged by one of his defeated rivals, who asserted that the champion's phenomenal scores were the result of his superior shells. The captain suggested that in their next match both contestants should use his ammunition, to which the Englishman eagerly consented. The captain was delighted, for well he knew what would happen to the action of the light and delicate English gun under such a charge. Before the match had proceeded very far the Britisher withdrew—for message.

With the invention and success of the ball tossing machine a craze for ridiculously high scores swept the country. Five thousand balls in 500 minutes, 5,104 out of 5,500, in seven hours and twenty minutes—these were some of the stunts that delighted the hearts of the gun people of that day. One man, the English crack, Dr. Carver, shot for six consecutive days, breaking 60,000 balls out of a possible 64,881. The wonder is that there remained of his shoulder anything more than pulp. True, it is on record that after the three-thousandth shot at such an exhibition in Gilmore's Garden, New York city, the contestant had to pry open his trigger fingers by main force and only succeeded in continuing in the match by frequent immersions of arm and shoulder in hot water.—Outing.

EDITING AN ENCYCLOPEDIA.

Strenuous Times in Getting Out an Early French Work.

Many adventures befell the French eighteenth century encyclopedia. More than once the production of that work, regarded by authority as revolutionary, had been stopped, eight days of imprisonment in the Bastille for the printer being one incident. At the very last moment, after Diderot had corrected the final proofs, the printer and his foreman secretly slashed the articles right and left, cutting out everything that seemed even possibly dangerous, and burned the manuscript. Diderot discovered the atrocity too late when referring to one of his own mutilated articles. But the most remarkable point is that for years very few persons knew of what had happened, even the contributors remaining in ignorance. They had had enough of their own articles when writing them.

Voltaire tells a pleasing story of Louis XV's conversion to the merits of the encyclopedia, according to the London Chronicle. The talk one night at a Trionon supper turned on sport and thence to gunpowder, as to the composition of which the party could not agree. Mme. de Pompadour lamented their all round ignorance.

The Voice of the People.

Lady John Russell visited Paris as a girl in 1830 and witnessed the somewhat artificial enthusiasm for Louis Philippe, who had just been placed on the throne by the revolution. "It is said," we are told, "that any small boy in those days could exhibit the king to curious sightseers by raising a cheer outside the Tuilleries windows, when his majesty, to whom any manifestation of enthusiasm was extremely precious, would appear automatically upon the balcony and bow."

One Formality.

"Oh, joy! She has written a letter saying she will marry me."
"Congratulations. When?"
"Well—er—you see her father has to indorse this promissory note before it's good."—Cleveland Leader.

Bearded Women.

The bearded woman is not a fiction. A bearded woman was taken by the Russians at the battle of Poltava and presented to the czar. Her beard measured over a yard. The great Margaret, governess of the Netherlands, had a very long, stiff beard. Mlle. Boes de Chene, born at Geneva in 1834, was exhibited in London in 1853 in her eighteenth year. She had a profuse head of hair, a large mustache and a strong black beard. There are other instances of bearded women.

make one final attempt to save himself. He would force the authorities of Monte Carlo to return to him what he had lost or he would blow up their gambling palace!

As soon as he was again on board his order was: "Clear decks for action. Raise the muzzle of every gun and let them point toward the heights of Monaco."

Whatever the sailors might think of such an order mattered little; obey they must. With all haste a messenger was sent ashore with a note, and the captain meanwhile paced the deck in silence awaiting the reply—a reply which meant life or death to him.

Finally the messenger returned carrying a bag of gold coins. That night the French cruiser weighed anchor and quietly steamed out into the Mediterranean, her captain happy that he had fared no worse and the authorities of Monte Carlo only too glad to be rid of so dangerous a visitor.—Washington Star.

Virtuous Indignation.

"The reporter who came to see about the fancy ball was a horrid creature."

"Why?"

"He asked for my picture to publish with the account, and I told him indignantly I did not care for such notoriety. Then I had to go out of the room a minute and forget my picture, which was lying on the table near where he was standing, and—"

"He took it and put it in?"

"N-no; he left it there!"—Baltimore American.

Bossing the Boss.

"Your clerks seem to be in a good humor," remarked the friend of the great merchant.

"Yes," replied the great merchant. "My wife has just been in, and it tickles them to death to see somebody boss me around."—Philadelphia Record.

On Her Side.

"I didn't know you had any idea of marrying her."

"I didn't. The idea was hers."—Lippincott's.

Absentminded George Dyer.

At Clifford's inn lived George Dyer, who lives in history chiefly as the man who walked out of Ella's house in Colebrookdale and into the New river, neck deep, and had to be revived by Lamb and his sister with hot brandy. Lamb was never tired of relating the incident. Dyer, an inoffensive, absent-minded old scholar, had Leigh Hunt's friendship as well as Lamb's, and the other essayist has told how, calling on Dyer in answer to an invitation to breakfast, it was to find no butter, no knives and no spout on the teapot. Dyer was so wedded to life in the inn that he wedded his laundress too.—London Spectator.

The Largest Islands.

Australia has long been classed as the least of the continents and not as an island. The largest islands are graded downward in the order of their size, as follows: Greenland, 850,000 square miles; New Guinea, 812,000; Borneo, 280,000; Madagascar, 230,000. In the absence of exact surveys these areas are rough estimates and must be considered only as approximations, but it is not likely that careful measurements will introduce corrections so large as to change the order of the four. Australia is but slightly smaller than the continental United States excluding Alaska.—Exchange.

qualities of each, which is known as "after damp," and it is the mixture of gases which destroys any life that may remain following a mine disaster.—Atlantic Monthly.

Every Minute Counts.

A business man from a small southern town was visiting New York. A friend asked him what was the most impressive thing he had seen so far—the high buildings, the subway, the ocean liners or what.

"None of them," was the prompt reply. "The thing that impressed me most was the rush in everything. I was in an office one day, and a young woman, evidently a new hand, was opening the mail. There must have been several hundred letters. She cut one open, took out the letter and laid it in its proper basket."

"Here, that will never do," said the boss. "Every time you lay down that paper cutter and take it up again you are wasting time. Cut them all open first and then take them out. You will save at least ten minutes that way every day."—New York Sun.

night at a Trianon supper turned on sport and thence to gunpowder, as to the composition of which the party could not agree. Mme. de Pompadour lamented their all round ignorance. For instance, she herself did not know what her rouge was made of or how her silk hose were manufactured. "Tis a pity," said the Duc de la Valliere, "that his majesty confiscated our encyclopedias, which cost us 100 pistoles."

The king recalled that he had a copy, and three valets were sent for the twenty-one volumes and staggered back with seven each. Gunpowder, rouge, silk stockings, were all found there. Some found answers to legal problems that troubled them. The king discovered the rights of his crown set forth, and in his satisfaction he allowed the confiscated copies to be returned.

Women Without Names.

"Womankind in Korea," says E. G. Kemp in "The Face of Manchuria," "suffers from a strange lack—the absence of names. A woman may possess a pet name; otherwise she has none. Frequently she does not even know her husband's name. If she becomes a Christian and receives baptism she acquires a name, and this must give her quite a new sense of dignity."

Nothing to Do but Loaf.

The most unfortunate man is the one who gets up in the morning with nothing to do and all day to devote to it.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Sincerity is the way to heaven. To think how to be sincere is the way of man.—Mencius.

50c. Bottle FREE

Read the Reasons for this Offer, so Vitally Important to the Sick:

Psychine is the greatest vitality builder of the age.

For thirty years Psychine has been curing almost every disease that is due to run-down vitality.

Hundreds of thousands have used Psychine with wonderful beneficial results.

We have received thousands of unsolicited testimonials from people whom Psychine has cured, of in many cases, hopeless ailments.

There are still thousands of people suffering from disease, however, whom Psychine can benefit.

There are still thousands who are trying to cure themselves by wrong methods, who are using dangerous and hurtful medicines.

There are still thousands who are gradually losing their vitality—from whose body the necessary resisting power to disease is slowly but surely slipping away.

There are still those who soon will hear the dread "call in the night" if they do not take prompt action.

To these we have the above message, viz.:

"Let us buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine from your druggist and give it to you, free, to prove its great value."

That 50-cent bottle of Psychine will tell you more powerfully than mere words can how tremendously beneficial Psychine will be for you.

It will give you an unmistakable indication of its wonderful power to renew the bodily vitality, to strengthen the phagocytes (the white corpuscles), the policemen or scavengers of the body.

The Surgical Department of the Japanese Army, in the Japo-Russian war, first drew the attention of the scientific world to the function of the white corpuscles of the blood or phagocytes.

Foreign medical men were astounded to see Japanese soldiers with wounds that had not been cleansed or dressed for days, that were apparently dirty, ill-kept, and altogether unsanitary.

Yet these dirty wounds healed marvellously; no army the world had ever known had such a wonderful record for the recovery of their wounded as the Japanese army.

And all because the Japanese knew how to let the white corpuscles cure.

There are two kinds of corpuscles in your blood, you know, red and white.

The red carry nutrition, the white are the policemen or scavengers of the body.

Whenever a disease germ enters the body, these white corpuscles attack and literally eat it.

A wound that attracts disease germs from the air is cleansed and healed by billions of phagocytes, or white corpuscles, devouring these unwelcome disease germs.

Any disease can be cured by these white corpuscles if they be in sufficient number or strong enough to attack and devour the germs that cause the disease.

If they are not in sufficient numbers or strength, then the disease germs eat them and disease claims the body.

That's the cause of every disease to which humanity is heir.

For centuries the cure of disease has been by means of herbs—nature's remedies.

It is only within recent times that we have come to know how these herbs act.

Now scientists tell us they increase the strength and numbers of the white corpuscles or phagocytes.

In Psychine we have some of the most healing and beneficial herbs in the world, herbs that increase and strengthen the white corpuscles.

From Arabia comes one herb, from South America another, China and Japan produce a third, while the jungle of India yields a fourth.

All these herbs are recognised by the medical profession as being the most beneficial to health that they know.

That's why Psychine, in the third of a century it has been made, has cured hundreds of thousands of people who suffered from the following diseases:

Le Grippe Bronchitis Hemorrhages Sore Throat Anemia Female Weakness Indigestion Poor Appetite Chills and Fevers Sleeplessness Nervous Troubles After-effects of Pleurisy, Pneumonia and La Grippe.	Bronchial Coughs Weak Lungs Weak Voice Spring Weakness Early Decline Catarrhal Affections Catarrh of Stomach Night Sweats Obstinate Coughs Coryza Dyspepsia
---	---

That's why we believe it will be beneficial to you.

Now we don't ask you to take our word for the tremendously beneficial effect of Psychine. Fill out the coupon below, mail it to us, and we'll give you an order on your druggist (for which we pay him the regular retail price) for a 50-cent bottle of Psychine to be given you free of cost.

We will undoubtedly buy and distribute in this manner, hundreds of thousands of these 50-cent bottles of Psychine.

And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation.

A confidence that has been based on our 30 years' experience with this splendid preparation with a full knowledge of the hundreds of thousands of cures it has made.

OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ont.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

When I wrote to her some time ago I was a very sick woman, suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the female organs, and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend this medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and think they are fine."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, Lindsay, Ontario.

We cannot understand why women will take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, without first trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration.

HE LED THE CHARGE.

And Then the General Changed His Mind About the Colonel.

The French General Gallifet was a famous cavalry leader, a good liver, a fine soldier and a man of impetuosity, daring and bravery. It is said that Gallifet's pluck was in great measure owing to his extraordinary powers of digestion, he once undertaking and accomplishing the feat of eating a wine-glass. In a biography of General Gallifet in the following story:

"During some maneuvers he was watching a charge of cavalry under his orders. Suddenly the leading squadron stopped dead. Gallifet roared, 'Send me the colonel!' And the colonel galloped up.

"Now, colonel, what's wrong?"

"We came upon a road at the bottom of an embankment which was too steep to ride down, sir."

"Nonsense, sir! You're not fit for your job. I will lead the charge. You go to the tail of the squadron."

"Gallifet took the command, galloped to the road and rolled down the embankment with his horse. Lying on his back with a sprained muscle in his leg, he shouted to his men to step, adding:

"Send me the colonel!"

"The colonel came up from the tail of the squadron.

JARRED THE BANK.

Sensational Plays That Have Been Pulled Off at Monte Carlo.

The big players have never succeeded in carrying away very much money from Monte Carlo. In 1905 a London newspaper published a story to the effect that an American from Chicago had won 500,000 francs there in one day and had taken the money home with him, but his name was not given. In the early nineties the sensation at Monte Carlo one season was the play of a Chicago youth of twenty-one, named Harry Rosenfeld, who made something like 500,000 francs in a week, playing during the day, but lost most of it at baccarat at night after the casino had closed.

The late David Christie Murray used to tell a story of a sensational play at Monte Carlo that he witnessed himself. "It was my fortune," he said, "to be in the casino on a Sunday night in 1899 when a French nobleman bearing a historic name entered the room with a fancy to play on No. 8. He was followed by a valet who was marked 'pugilist' from head to heel and carried a cash box which proved to be full of 1,000 franc notes. 'Numero huit,' said M. le Duc, 'et maximum par tout.' He was known, and his challenge was accepted before the cash box was opened. No. 8 turned up three times running. M. le Duc netted three times seventeen times 6,000 francs in about three minutes, and the bank was closed. What brought his historic dukedom there in the nick of time for that trifling pique of luck nobody can tell. He did not want the money, for he had just married a few odd millions, and he did not seem to care whether he lost or won, but stood impassive as a red Indian through the few minutes of that stupendous game. It was within a quarter of an hour of closing time, and there were not many people present, but the sale went mad."

The two biggest winners at Monte Carlo of recent years to figure prominently in the newspapers are Charles Wells, a Londoner, who won 750,000 francs in a few weeks and lost it back and considerable more, and a Yorkshire mechanic named Jagers, who won 8,000,000 francs on a system and was rapidly losing it back by the same system when he had sense enough to quit the game. He got away with considerably more than 1,000,000 francs.—Frank Marshall White in Harper's Weekly.

Their Last Hope Gone.

When the minister praised the raspberry jam at Mrs. Green's bountiful Saturday night supper he could not imagine why Angie and Horatio, the twins, gazed at him so reproachfully. "Don't you like raspberry jam, my little man?" he asked Horatio.

"Yes, sir, I do, and Angie does," said Horatio in distinctly resentful tones, "and mother told us that she was afraid the last she made wasn't quite up to the mark and if you didn't praise it Angie and I could have it for lunch on our bread, for Mrs. Willis and Mrs. Shedd never said a word when they ate it, and you've made the third. But now she'll use it for the church sociables." And Horatio looked gloomily at his twin, who returned the look in kind.—Youth's Companion.

A Different Idea.

A well known man had lectured upon color blindness, and at the conclusion of his remarks a collier, who had evidently not grasped his explanations, asked him if he would explain.

"Certainly," said the professor.

"Wot is this culler blindness, then?"

"Well," replied the learned gentleman, holding up a piece of red colored glass, "supposing that when you look at this you imagine it is green. That would be an instance."

"That's culler blindness, do yer say?" replied the man, with a look of contempt. "I should call it blessed ignorance!"—London Mail.

METEORIC DUST.

An Invisible but Constant Shower of Tiny Hollow Steel Balls.

Meteoric dust is composed of minute hollow spheres of steel that look under the microscope like leaden shot. They are infinitely finer than grains of sand. Their origin is interesting. Meteors, or shooting stars as they are generally called, have from the beginning of things been bombarding the world at a rate estimated by the highest authority at many thousands an hour. Owing to the earth's protecting envelope of air very few of these missiles reach us. In size meteors vary from a few ounces to many pounds in weight, and it is only very occasionally that one is of sufficient dimensions to survive the passage of 80 to 100 miles through an atmosphere increasing in density as the earth is approached. The speed at which they enter the atmosphere, calculated at not less than thirty-five miles a second, generates such intense heat by friction that the iron of which the meteor principally consists is immediately reduced to an incandescent vapor, which is the luminous train so frequently seen in the heavens on a clear night.

The vapor rapidly cools and condenses in the form of these minute particles, which assume the spherical form, as does shot during its fall from the top of a tower. Finally the little spheres are scattered by the winds and currents in the upper regions and gradually descend in their millions as an invisible but never ending shower. The perfect condition in which the spheres are found is due to the presence of certain noncorrosive elements found by analysis to be present in the metal of meteors which have come to earth.

These little spheres can be found in almost any sample of dust, particles where it has collected in sheltered recesses or hollows, as in the gutter, on the housetop or round the roots of old trees and dry ditches. They may be readily gathered by a magnet and when mounted form an interesting object for the microscope. — Chicago News.

CAGLIOSTRO.

Effect of a Draft of the Notorious Charlatan's Elixir of Life.

Cagliostro, the famous eighteenth century charlatan, was the hero of many strange stories. A great lady who was also, unfortunately for herself, an old one and was unable to resign herself to the fact was reported to have consulted Cagliostro, who gave her a vial of the precious liquid (his "wine of Egypt"), with the strictest injunction to take two drops when the moon entered its last quarter. While waiting for this period to arrive the lady who desired to be rejuvenated shut up the vial in her wardrobe and the better to insure its preservation informed her maid that it was a remedy for the colic.

Fatal precaution! By some mischance on the following night the maid was seized with the very malady of which her mistress had spoken. Remembering the remedy so fortuitously at hand, she got up, opened the wardrobe and emptied the vial at a draft. The next morning she went, as usual, to wait on her mistress, who looked at her in surprise and asked her what she wanted. Thinking the old lady had had a stroke in the night, she said: "Oh, madam, don't you know me? I am your maid."

"My maid is a woman of fifty," was the reply, "and you?"

But she did not finish the sentence. The woman had caught a glimpse of her face in a mirror. The wine of Egypt had rejuvenated her thirty

Death of W. S. Williams

A Former Well-Known
Napaneean Dies
At California

The following obituary notice we clipped from a California paper:

As the result of a stroke of apoplexy, Judge Walter Scott Williams, for many years secretary for the grand lodge of Good Templars, and formerly a leading lawyer of Canada, died at his home, 459 Orchard street, where he had lived for the past six years. At the time of his death he was surrounded by members of his family, who held out hope for his recovery until the end. They were in constant attendance since he was stricken.

His daughter, Mrs. Rupert Whitehead, who left this city a few days prior to his illness for a trip to Canada in an effort to regain her health, has received the sad news and is expected to return home. No arrangements for the funeral will be made until her arrival here.

BORN IN ONTARIO.

The late Judge Williams was born in the county of Prince Edward, Ontario, May 24, 1838, and was educated in Fairfield Academy, New York, and also Victoria College, Cobourg. He studied law with Lewis Wallbridge, who was chief justice of Manitoba, and also with D. B. Read of Toronto. During his professional career in Napanee, Canada, he was instrumental in forming the Napanee, Tamworth and Quebec Railway company. He was its secretary for many years.

It was mainly through his efforts that the different municipalities voted bonuses to build the road.

In 1874 he was elected mayor of Napanee, and served two terms, and was United States consul agent at Napanee, having been commissioned by President Arthur in 1882. He was also agent for the Western Canada Loan and Savings company of Toronto.

INTERESTED IN CITY.

About fifteen years ago he was associated in the legal profession with Judge Niles Searies and practiced law in the higher courts of the state. About twenty-five years ago he came to California, where he has displayed an interest in its civic and social affairs. The deceased was esteemed for his intellect and devotion to his family and friends. He retired from public life about fifteen years ago. Judge Williams was very active in the Masonic, Odd Fellows and Good Templar lodges of Canada.

He leaves a widow, Mrs. Elmira Williams, and four daughters, Mrs. Rupert Whitehead, Mrs. W. H. George, Mrs. Robert Mills and Mrs. Nellie B. Parks.

FIRST TYPEWRITER.

It Was a Clumsy Machine and Practically Useless.

Most persons will be surprised to learn that the typewriting machine is not, as they imagine, a distinctly modern invention. So long ago as 1714 a patent was taken out in England by Henry Mill for "a machine for impressing letters singly and progressively as in writing, whereby all writings may be engrossed in paper so exact as not to be distinguished from print."

His machine was, however, a clumsy one and practically useless. It was not until over a century later (1829) that anything more in this line was attempted. Then the first American typewriter, called a "typographer," was patented by W. A. Burgh.

In 1823 a machine was produced in France having a separate key lever for each letter, and between the years 1840 and 1860 Sir Charles Wheatstone invented several machines which are now preserved in the South Kensington museum, London.

In 1873 C. L. Sholes, an American, after five or six years' work, succeeded in producing a machine sufficiently perfect to warrant extensive manufacture. He interested a firm of gun manufacturers in it, and in 1874 the first model of the modern typewriter was put upon the market.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

"Oh, madam, don't you know me? I am your maid."
"My maid is a woman of fifty," was the reply, "and you?"
But she did not finish the sentence. The woman had caught a glimpse of her face in a mirror. The wine of Egypt had rejuvenated her thirty years!

Cagliostro's valet was as great a rogue as he and posed equally as a mystery monger. "Your master," said a skeptic to him one day, "is taking us all in. Tell me, is it true that he was present at the marriage at Cana?"
"You forget, sir," was the reply, "I have only been in his service a century."

Lisbon's Names.

Lisbon, the capital of Portugal, sometimes claims to have been founded by Ulysses in the course of his wanderings. But, according to the London Chronicle, there is no doubt that Ulyssippos is only a fanciful version of Olisippo, the most ancient name of what was probably at first a Phoenician city. When the Romans absorbed and municipalized Olisippo it became Felicitas Julia, but in the hands of the Moslems it slipped back to Lashbuna. Byron's line in "Childe Harold," "What beauties does Lisboa first unfold!" gives the Portuguese spelling of the name today.

There's No Risk

If This Medicine Does Not Benefit You Pay Nothing.

A physician who made a specialty of stomach trouble, particularly dyspepsia, after years of study perfected the formula from which Rexall Dyspepsia Tablet are made.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe them to be the greatest remedy known for the relief of acute indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. They are rich in pepsin, one of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine. The relief they afford is almost immediate. Their use with persistency and regularity for a short time brings about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will insure healthy appetite, aid digestion and promote nutrition. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction, we will return you the money you paid us for them, without question or formality. They come in three sizes, prices 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain them only at—The Rexall Store.—T. B. Wallace, Druggist.

FARM LABORERS AND DOMESTICS.

Commissioner Coombs and Colonel
Lamb, Director of The Army's Emigration
Work, have just returned from an extended tour making arrangements for the placing of the immigrants that will come to Canada under the auspices of The Salvation Army in the spring. These will principally consist of laborers for farms and domestics. During the past year The Army has arranged the immigration of about ten thousand persons to this country, and arrangements are being perfected for the bringing of a larger number during the next season. A number of Canadian Officers will shortly be visiting the Old Country for the purpose of selecting, advising, and conducting parties. The immigrants that come to this country through The Army are of a highly desirable class, being specially selected by experienced agents who are familiar with the class of workers that Canadian farming calls for.

The ten thousand immigrants of last year were selected from over 100,000 applicants. It will thus be seen how severe is the process of selection.

Farmers and others in Ontario who desire to secure labour for next spring should at once get into touch with The Salvation Army, as we understand there is a great demand for The Army's immigrants. Write for information and applications forms to Brigadier H. Morris, Immigration and Colonization Department, James and Albert Sts., Toronto.

The Great Art of Dying.

To die without rebellion and without weakness is the masterpiece of a man.
A mountain guide whose name the London Mail does not mention in narrating the story of his heroism, with two others, was leading a party over one of the most dangerous passes of the higher Alps.

The men, as is usual, were tied together by a long rope. As they scaled a wall of ice they slipped on the edge of a frightful chasm. The guide was at the end of the rope.

Without his weight there was a chance for the others to regain their footing; with it his experienced eye told him there was none. With instant courage he drew his knife from his belt and said quietly to the man
next him:

"Tell mother how it happened, Edmond."
He cut the rope and fell, never to be seen again.

Many papers, English and American, have been commenting on the significance of figures recently given by a British statistician and economist in a paper on the thrift, savings and foreign investments of "the tight little island." It is estimated that the total savings of the British for 1910—a year of by no means exceptional prosperity, a year of political unrest and agitation—reached the unprecedented figure of $1,750,000,000. Half of this has gone abroad for investment in railroads and industries.

We have heard much concerning British decadence and degeneration, the growth of pauperism and poverty and "radical" taxes and budgets. Yet there is evidently another side to the picture. Britain still has a tremendous surplus of capital to export for investment, and interest, rent and dividends flow in golden streams from every part of the world to the little island. A large part of this income is consumed by the leisure classes, but another part is reinvested. These savings and investments are justly regarded as a pledge of peace. England has every reason to avoid and discourage war, for war endangers returns from investments, destroys wealth and capital, and dislocates commerce.

Clearly, what is true of England is true of other industrial nations having savings to protect and invest. France is a heavy foreign investor, Germany is beginning to develop that source of income, and the United States, for generations a large borrower, is becoming a lender. The first condition of industrial and social progress, of a satisfactory solution of the problem of wealth distribution and equal opportunity, is international peace. War to divert attention from home questions is becoming less and less "available," thanks to investments, the security of capital and the pressure of labor for higher standards of living.

A doughty young thinker, a physician and socialist, has introduced a significant social reform. He marks his engagement by presenting his fiancée with a set of books instead of an engagement ring. After having made a long retrospect of human society he concludes it is time for a change. He deprecates the primitive day when man either captured his female partner or purchased her from her parents, and when, once in possession, he placed a ring on her finger as a symbol of inferiority, a sign that she was his personal property. Away with such an idea! Banish the ring. Bring out, in elegant bindings, Ibsen, Tolstoi, Shaw, Zangwill and a few more of the modern thinkers.

A MARK ON THE CALENDAR

We Talk of the New Beginnings When We Are Unwilling to Leave Old Ways

"The youth is renewed."—Ps. ciii., 5.

Beginnings make all the difference. The hope of new beginnings keeps the world young; the promise of new morning makes the weary day glad and the dark night bright.

The sense of a circle to the year, of recurring days and months sustains us in the hope that we shall come back to old days again and make new endeavors in them. This feeling that, in some sense, every day is a new beginning saves us from the impenetrable pessimism of the fixed, unchangeable act and the specter of our deeds as casting character in adamant.

This eternally upspringing life saves us from decay of despair. We believe no matter how a man has failed he may rise from the dust to nobility of living. So believing we rise ourselves, we call on our fellows to try again; the hope makes

THE REALITY POSSIBLE.

It is a dark hour for a man when he writes it down as his conviction that things cannot change, when he says the things that have been shall remain. He yields to the world about him, he who was born to conquer it. For, after all, the hope of better things in the future, the confidence of the possibility of new beginnings in life is based on this, the power within us to determine what life shall mean and what it shall mete out to us.

The coming days fall not like snowflakes unbidden on us, nor do they wait us like lurking villains, foes hiding in the shadow of the future.

They are to be of our own making. They are not yet determined and no man can say what they shall be. We need to approach this new year with large faith in our possibilities of better selfhood through its days. With confidence that if we but will better ways and days they shall be ours.

The year will flow on in its course; the summer will follow the spring, and the ripening grain and enriching of spring into beauty and fullness of glory and wealth. But where shall man learn the law of like growth? What shall the passing seasons see in him? Is there for us any secret of the days so that they shall find us maturing, growing stronger, kinder, more godlike and divine?

This at least we may learn from the passing year; that growth is a matter of decay and development both, that the new life and the better forms of life spring out of the perishing old life and

THE PASSING FORMS.

Growth is as much a matter of pushing out the new ones. If we could go forward, then, we must be willing to leave some things behind.

There can be no progress without without some forsaking. Each day should see some old way left, some old garments outworn, grown too small for the soul to walk in. You will never find your better self save at the price of bidding farewell to your old self.

This, too, we can learn from the year: The fruitage of nature is the product of harmony with the universe. We will find our fullness of living when we take this as a world of law, when we learn to live in the loving will of the father of all.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, FEB. 5.

Lesson VI.—Elijah the Prophet appears in Israel, I Kings 17.
Golden Text, Psa. 84. 10.

Verse 1. Elijah the Tishbite—He comes upon the scene, like Melchizedek, without parentage, and at once stands out as the mouthpiece of Jehovah, the God of Israel, in sharp contrast to Jezebel and the worship of Baal, introduced by her. The element of mystery surrounding his origin is preserved in the name given him. The implied name of a place, Tishbeh, or Tishbi, gives no clue, as no such place is known. If the word translated sojourners is regarded, as it may be properly, as a proper noun, the verse would read, "from Thesbon of Gilead," and this is in accord with Josephus. Somewhere, then, in the severe, but picturesque, district of Gilead, east of Jordan, bordering on the desert, the prophet had his origin. And the ruggedness of the hills from tremendous faith which was necessary on Elijah's part to speak these words, Fear not, and The jar of meal shall not waste. How long he remained here we do not know, but it seems safe to conjecture at least two years.

17. No breath left in him—It has been suggested that this language is not decisive as a description of death. But it is certain Elijah considered the lad dead. At any rate, whether he was actually so, or only on the borderland, it was through the prayer of the prophet that he was restored.

18. What have I to do with thee?—In her terror the poor widow wishes this man of God had never come. It was a common superstition that death accompanied the appearance of superhuman beings. His coming, she thought, called the divine attention to some sin of her past which she hoped had been overlooked. A slumbering conscience is often awakened in the presence of death.

19. The chamber where he abode—It is an unnecessary assumption that he kept under cover during this entire period. There were endless opportunities for him to satisfy his natural fondness for solitary places.

Richard Barrington's Froud

Richard Barrington sat alone in his chief's office. On the desk before him lay a pile of papers, which notwithstanding their importance, failed to hold his wandering attention.

Suddenly he was roused by a low knock.

"Sorry to disturb you, sir," said a clerk, apologetically, "but a boy has brought a note which he insists on giving into your own hand."

Barrington looked surprised, but made no comment.

"All right," he said, shortly; "bring him in."

He took the note from the boy's hand half-impatiently, and glanced quickly at the envelope. At sight of the handwriting he suddenly changed color, and regarded the messenger with quickened interest.

"Any answer?" he asked abruptly.

"No, sir; he only said I was to be sure and see that you got it all right."

"Thanks. Then you may go."

The moment the messenger had withdrawn, Barrington eagerly tore open the envelope and found that, besides a letter for himself, there was also one in an unsealed envelope addressed to his chief.

With nervous haste he began to read his own letter—at first in a dazed kind of fashion, as if unable to grasp its meaning. Without preface, the letter began:—

"Is this, then, the end of your life-long friendship? Oh, Dick, to think that you could have played it so low down, that my friend should have served me such a cowardly, dastardly trick! You think your secret safe, but I know it. I know how those bank-notes came to be secreted in the inner partition of my desk, and also of your secret visit to my rooms. You thought yourself unseen, but my landlady saw you; though, knowing our friendship and thinking I had sent you for something, she allowed you to pass out unchallenged. The same hand which placed those notes in my desk secreted those found in my room! I give you credit for imagining that the strength of our chief's old friendship with my father would restrain him from prosecuting me. You were mistaken. He has allowed me until to-morrow to produce the money and confess; failing that—prosecution! You know why it is impossible for me to restore the money for the cashed cheque. But I can 'confess,' and this I have done."

Richard Barrington's face grew deathly white, and with a startled cry the letter dropped from his nerveless hand.

"Confess!" he gasped. "Allan confess!"

Quickly recovering himself he picked up the fallen note, and read on with feverish anxiety:—

"You will find it all plainly written in the unsealed letter which I enclose, and which you may read before giving it to Mr. Foster. As to my motive for doing this, you will understand that it is not for your sake, for you have forfeited all right, not only to friendship, infidelity, a sign that she was his personal property. Away with such an idea! Banish the ring. Bring out, in elegant bindings, Ibsen, Tolstoi, Shaw, Zangwill and a few more of the modern thinkers.

How slow is progress! How trying are the half measures of reformers! If Benedick had wanted to make a clean sweep he should have given no present at all. A library of advanced thought, no less than a ring, serves to show the man as the boss, the bookkeeper, the kingpin of the new deal, the fountain of domestic cash, the responsible party of the coming household as it turns its modest front toward the world at large. If the new wife is not to be a "chattel," but, as per programme, an equal, a companion and a helpmate, then an even exchange of gifts, if gifts must be obtruded at all, would manifestly be the thing.

All this, of course, assuming the bride herself to be an advanced thinker. But so many brides are not. Bothering little about the evolution of human society and fussing not at all about marriage by capture, they take things as they find them. If other girls have wedding marches, they want wedding marches. If other girls have wedding rings, they will want wedding rings. Despite the reformatory zeal of this bold thinker, the ring, whether as a comforting symbol or as a flattering adornment, is unlikely to be retired.

NOVEL EYEGLASSES.

German Inventions for the Near Sighted and for the Police.

A German inventor has devised what he calls telescope eyeglasses. They are intended for the use of short sighted persons by the very simple means of enlarging the image on the retina. They are specially designed for that class of people who cannot wear the ordinary simply corrected glasses.

The monocle combination consists of two parts united in a single metal frame, a front objective lens or collector and a second nearer the eye to disperse the rays at the proper angle to make the correction for the degree of myopia in question. When properly prescribed and made, says the Scientific American, the two lenses have such relation to each other that there is no distortion, astigmatism or colored border to the image obtained.

Another German has invented what he calls police eyeglasses. On the side next the face they have tiny concave mirrors which may be extended sidewise or be folded back so as not to show. They give the wearer if he has normal sight an image of what is going on almost directly behind him. They are proposed for the German secret police. Whether adopted or not is not to be ascertained from headquarters.

The best proof of courage is taking your own ills with cheer.

as a proper noun, the verse would read, "from Thesbon of Gilead," and this is in accord with Josephus. Somewhere, then, in the severe, but picturesque, district of Gilead, east of Jordan, bordering on the desert, the prophet had his origin. And the ruggedness of the hills from whence he came passed into his character.

Said unto Ahab—He was a short man, like Paul, and the unkempt hair of the Nazirite fell over his shoulders. He was clad in rough attire. He waited for none of the usual courtesies and homages of the court. With bold abruptness, he breaks in upon the royal presence and announces his startling message. Why should he fear on Ahab, so long as he was the messenger of the God of Israel before whom I stand?

Dew nor rain—This was a recognized form of punishment for apostasy. Compare Deut. 11. 17. For three years or more there followed a severe famine which afflicted all Israel. James represents the drought as an outcome of the prayer of Elijah, though that is not mentioned here. But the prophet does say that the curse shall be terminated only in accordance with his own word.

3. Hide thyself—He would of course be in immediate danger from the revengeful disposition of Jezebel. The king himself seems to have had a restraining reverence for the prophets of God.

The brook Cherith—As this was on the east side of the river Jordan, Elijah would be thoroughly familiar with its hiding places, for here he had had most of his training.

4. The ravens to feed thee—Attempts have been made to eliminate the supernatural element in these stories of Elijah. Here, for example, the word "ravens" has been translated "Arabs" and "merchants." But it is not probable the story would have been thought worth repeating and preserving except for this miraculous element.

9. Zarephath—Thither he was sent as soon as the drought had dried up the brook Cherith. It is the modern Sarafend. On a promontory, about eight miles south of Sidon, it would afford both shelter in an unexpected place, and would not be entirely given over to the drought because of the unfailling fountains of Lebanon. The haughty Jezebel would scarcely think to search in her own Baal-worshipping country for the prophet of the Lord. It was here that Jesus, centuries later, went on a mission of mercy. As it turned out, Elijah went on a mission of mercy also, as well as for the purpose of sustaining himself.

10. A little water . . . that I may drink—He had come a long journey, through a parched country, and must have been exhausted.

12. Jehovah thy God—His speech or his dress must have betrayed him. She herself was, of course, only a heathen woman. Elijah was to learn that even in the heart of a despised worshipper of Baal there was a warm sympathy and a capacity for kindness which no doubt went a long way toward softening his own rough nature.

I have not a cake—The devastation of the famine had extended as far as Zarephath, and brought with it widespread misery.

12-16. One must not overlook the sense of death.

19. The chamber where he abode—It is an unnecessary assumption that he kept under cover during this entire period. There were endless opportunities for him to satisfy his natural fondness for solitary places.

21. Stretched himself upon the child three times—In order to induce respiration and give warmth to the body. He combined with his earnest prayer such simple methods of restoration as he knew.

24. Now I know—She had called him a man of God previously, but this rescue from death of her boy, made her certain beyond all doubt. And it also elicited from her a confession of faith in the God whom Elijah served.

A PARAPHRASE.

Isaiah 53.

Who hath believed the faithful word?
And unto whom hath now the Lord His mighty arm revealed?
For as a root from direct ground Hath grown that tender plant renowned—
The One divinely sealed.

A man of griefs and sorrows then, Rejected and despised of men,
All unadmired was He:
As one from whom men hide their face,
Beauty and comeliness and grace
In Him they could not see.

Stricken seemed He beneath the rod,
And smitten by the hand of God:
Grief was in Him revealed:
Afflicted, wounded, bruised, and sore,
Alone our chastisement He bore:
We by His stripes are healed.

All we like sheep have gone astray;
And turned each one to his own way:
He came our souls to win:
And, as a lamb to slaughter led,
So did He suffer in our stead:
On Him was laid our sin.

Our iniquities caused His pain:
For our transgression was He slain:
The sinless One was He.
They with the wicked made His grave:
And with the rich Himself He gave
By death our life to be.

Enthroned in heaven and earth as King,
The travail of His soul shall bring—
Results supremely grand:
Forever shall He be adored;
And all the pleasure of the Lord
Shall prosper in His hand.

Uniondale, Ont., 1910.

The Judge—Can you describe any specific act of cruelty on the part of your husband? The Complainant—I should say I can! Whenever he had anything to say to me he'd call me up on the telephone and say it and then disconnect before I had a chance to talk back to him.

Mose Johnson—Say, Pete, s'pose we gets ketcherd fer stealin' dese heah turkeys—does we get jailed? Pete Persimmon—Suttinly not; turkeys am so high now-a-days dat stealin' a turkey's des' like stealin' a railroad!

None is hopelessly poor until he has lost all friends.

"You will find it all plainly written in the unsealed letter which I enclose, and which you may read before giving it to Mr. Foster. As to my motive for doing this, you will understand that it is not for your sake, for you have forfeited all right, not only to friendship, but even to consideration and respect. No; it is for her sake—for Maisie—that I have done it. I too loved her, and at one time dared to hope that she returned my love. But I found out my mistake; and the day you told me of your secret engagement to her I resolved to keep my own love a secret. Now I need hide it from you no longer. She is more to me than my life! I dare not—will not—clear myself at the cost of her life's happiness. She must never know the truth; she must never learn that the man she loves is a thief and a forger—the betrayer of his friend! It would crush her—loving you as you say she does! But, oh, Dick, be good to her! Let this transgression be your last; and if ever your conscience urges you to atone for your sin, and for the wrong you have done me, work it out in added love and care for her. If ever you think of me, let the memory of your old friend and his last sacrifice prompt you to lead a more upright life, and to shun dishonesty as you would the plague.

"But though I have taken upon myself your guilt, I cannot allow the name—the clean, good name my father bore—to be dishonored; even though, being dead, he would no longer suffer. Before you can reach me I shall be dead.

"The manner of my death must be your secret. I have in my possession a powerful Indian drug, which causes painless death and leaves no trace behind—only symptoms of 'cardiac failure.' This I mean to take as soon as I have sent off my letter, for I feel sure that when I am dead Mr. Foster will not make public my disgrace for the sake of my father's good name. Farewell, Dick.

"Yours in sorrow,
"ALLAN WESTBURY."

Dick Barrington read the tragic message to the end; then a bitter, passionate cry escaped from his white lips, as if wrung from his very heart.

"Allan! Oh, Allan!"
For a brief space he sat as if paralyzed—bereft of all power of motion or conscious thought. Then, in a half-involuntary, mechanical sort of way, he sprang to his feet and made towards the door, as if realizing that something was required of him, and that instantly, yet scarcely knowing what.

But as full recollection returned he paused. For, after all, what good purpose could he serve by going now? Already he was too late, and his going would simply rouse needless suspicions. Seeing, then, that Allan was beyond his help, it only remained for him now to look to himself. He must be guarded and—know nothing.

Still white and shaken he sank into his chair again, and his eye caught sight of the other envelope—Allan's confession.

Slowly, and with trembling hands he drew out the short, clear message and read it carefully through. Yes, it was all down, word for word! The crime—his crime—stood unmistakably confessed!

In a flash Barrington realized all that it meant. He had only to forward this to his chief, and no man ner of suspicion could ever fall on himself! His path would be clear; his rival safely out of the way—dishonored as well as dead! Surely then he would succeed in winning the beautiful girl he had so long desired.

"Secret engagement between them." He only wished there were! That had been a lie to blind Allan and keep him out of the running. Suddenly, and without warning, the door opened and a girl entered the room.

Barrington started, and, hurriedly thrusting the letters into their separate envelopes, slipped them into his pocket and rose unsteadily to his feet.

"Oh!" The girl paused, a slight frown puckering her white forehead. "I—I thought my father was here. I promised to call for him at four o'clock."

"I am sorry, Miss Foster, but he has not returned since luncheon. Something must have detained him. I am expecting him every moment, though, as he knows there are some rather urgent matters requiring his signature."

With his usual cool, smooth manner he wheeled forward the large "easy."

"Of course you will wait, Miss Foster?"

"I don't know," replied the girl, doubtfully.

"Miss Foster, what have I done to offend you?" he burst out, impatiently. "Why do you dislike me so?"

"I was not aware that you had offended me," replied the girl, coldly. "or that I—disliked you."

"But you are always so—so distant, and you try to avoid me. I have seen it." Then, as she did not reply, he went on passionately; "Miss Foster—Maisie, cannot you try to like me a little? You must know how devotedly I love you. And I have reason to hope that your father will favor my suit."

"My father! You have spoken to my father?" gasped the startled girl.

"Yes; why not? As an honorable man I told him of my feelings towards you, and asked his permission to win you if I could."

"I should have thought, with your friend under such a cloud, that you would have had no heart for your own private affairs just now!" cried the girl, bitterly.

Barrington saw the mistake into which—in his eagerness, and in the jangled state of his nerves—he had allowed himself to be betrayed.

"Forgive me!" he said, humbly.

"I can only plead the overmastering power of my love for you, for seeming—even for a moment—to forget the awful blight that has fallen on Allan's life! Believe me, he has scarcely been absent from my mind night or day since—it happened."

"Since what happened?" she asked abruptly.

"Since his—" He paused, as his better nature momentarily asserted itself and restrained the treacherous lie. But after a quick glance at the lovely, flushed face before him he hardened himself, and muttered, in a low voice, "Since his theft and forgery."

"You mean since the accusation of it! You know—you who have known Allan so long—you must know that he is innocent of such a thing!" she cried passionately.

"Believe me, dear Miss Foster," he said, in a tone of quiet assurchild! I am not going to prosecute Allan. I am going to save him, if that is possible. He is innocent—God forgive me for believing him guilty—but he is in great danger, and every moment is precious."

"I must go with you, father. If Allan is in danger, I must go too."

"My little girl! Do you love him so much?"

"Better than my life!" she said, simply.

Her father stooped and kissed her hurriedly, and there was a world of tenderness in his eyes as he saw the great love shining from her own. At all costs Allan must be saved—for her sake now, as well as for his own. Unless it was already too late!

"Listen, Maisie!" he said, quickly. "I cannot take you now. But—trust me. I will bring Allan back to you—if I can!"

Thrusting the letter in his friend's hand he hurried him out, saying, "Read that as we go along!" And the next moment they were gone.

Allan Westbury, alone in his cheerless room, paced restlessly to and fro, awaiting the return of his messenger. After writing the letters, he had been seized with the desire to know definitely that they had safely reached their destination before taking the fatal step upon which he had decided.

At last he heard the sound of feet upon the stairs, and in a moment he had opened the door and met the boy at the head.

"Well, have you delivered it all right?" he asked, sharply.

"Yes, sir. I gave it to him myself, just as you told me."

"That's right, Johnny."

He gave a wan smile, and, placing a shilling in the boy's grimy hand, sent him off grinning with delight at his good luck.

As soon as the tousled head had disappeared down the stairs again, Westbury turned slowly into his room and was proceeding to lock the door, when he paused.

"Better not do that," he muttered. "Only give them needless trouble."

With lagging footsteps he crossed over to a corner cupboard and took down a small medicine chest, but as he tried to unlock it his hands trembled so much that the key fumbled round the hole in vain.

A second and more determined effort and the chest lay open before him, exposing a neat array of medicines.

"Let me see; it was a sealed packet," he said, slowly. "Poor old Geoff! He little thought what use his wonderful drug would be put to after he had gone. Ah, yes, this must be it!"

With hands that shook he took up the open packet; then paused.

He was young, and life had been very sweet. Was he doing right to fling it away? How bright his prospects had seemed such a short while ago! Life for him then had been full of sacred hopes, for it seemed as if the love beating in his heart was awakening an answering throb in hers!

No, he was not flinging his life away in wanton wastefulness. It was for love's sake.

Slowly, but with hands that no longer trembled, he raised the packet to his lips and, throwing his head back, steadily emptied the contents into his mouth. To the last by so deadly a drug that there is no antidote for it!"

"You thought you were," broke in the doctor, quickly; "but it must have been only a harmless sleeping draught you took."

"What?"

In a moment his lethargy vanished, and Allan rose unsteadily to his feet, then suddenly collapsed.

"I can't stand yet," he said, with a shaky laugh. "Will you pass me the small chest you will find in that cupboard?"

The doctor obeyed and watched him curiously.

Allan eagerly opened the case and feverishly seized upon a small packet.

"Why, there must have been two of them! And I thought—"

"May I open this?" broke in the doctor. "I have been in India a few years, and know something of their powerful drugs."

Opening the packet, the doctor raised it cautiously to his nostrils, then threw a pinch of the powder into the almost extinct fire. Instantly there shot up a lurid flame, and the whole room became filled with a mist-like vapor.

"This is the poison, without a doubt," he said, decidedly, as soon as the mist had cleared. "You may think yourself lucky you made the mistake, young man!"

But he spoke to deaf ears. At the sudden reaction Allan Westbury, for the first time in his life, had fainted away.

"How ever could you have thought it possible that I could love Richard Barrington?" asked Maisie Foster, as she sat with her lover a few days later.

"Well, you see, he always seemed such a good fellow, and—"

"Good fellow, indeed!" broke in Maisie, hotly. "How can you say that after what he has done, and after deliberately trying to fasten his guilt upon you?"

"But he repented, dear; at least, we will believe so," pleaded Allan.

"We have so much happiness ourselves we can afford to be generous, darling. Let us think the best."

But the doubt was never solved.

After discovering his mistake Richard Barrington had taken refuge in flight, and, enlisting under an assumed name, was sent out at once to the frontier, where he proved himself the most reckless of the little band of soldiers dispatched to quell a native rising.

When the skirmish was over, amongst the dead faces which lay upturned to the silent stars was that of the would-be betrayer of his friend, whose plans had so strangely miscarried.—London Tit-Bits.

CONCERNING LIARS.

Mr. Kawington on the Question, Is Lying Ever Justifiable?

"Some people are natural born liars and then," said Mr. Kawington, "we meet some occasionally who are inveterate truth tellers, and I don't know which makes the most trouble, if either makes any, for we are apt to make allowances for both. The natural born liar when we have come to know him we discount, and we are liable to be tender to those who come under the lash of the ruthless truth teller."

"I suppose that most people are not liars; their conscience or the fear of consequences makes them

On the Farm

THE FEEDING LOT.

There is no good reason why the feed lot should not be kept in good condition, even if there is no hill on the farm. If the land is level and only a small bunch of cattle is to be fed, a good plan is to remove the top soil with a road scraper to the depth of six inches or more, and then cover the surface with smooth stones topped off with coarse coal cinders mixed with sand.

Of course, the best way to keep a small feed lot dry is to pave it with brick. This costs something at the start, but the investment will pay every time. The cattle are always on dry footing and no feed is wasted by being thrown on the ground.

If a large lot of cattle is to be fed, the cost of paving a large lot is out of the question; but it can be underdrained with success. The drain laid in the ordinary way, from ten to twenty feet apart, will keep any lot that is not located in a swamp in good condition, even in the rainiest part of the season.

Drainage will cost no more than sheds and unless the sheds are very wide they soon become soaked with the driving rains and mud is then carried into them, by the cattle, and are little better than an open lot.

On our own farm we have two lots of ten acres each, which are perfectly drained. They are on a slightly sloping rise, and we placed the drains about twenty feet apart. Perhaps 40 feet would have answered the purpose, but we decided to take no chances, and we are satisfied with our investment. These two lots cost us $400 for tile and work, besides our own, but we think it has paid, because our cattle have been fattened in comfort.—C. M. Coulton.

WITH THE DAIRY HERD.

The fault of dairymen in general is not so much the lack of knowledge as the proper application of the knowledge they possess.

One thing that we ought to consider when we start out to buy breeding cattle is the fact that the knowledge, skill and character of the man we buy them of is about as important as the animals that we are buying.

Can a man sow poor seed and hope to get a good crop? Will Nature make any exceptions in one man's favor? These are questions which ought to interest the man who keeps on year after year breeding his cows to some scrub bull.

Too many farmers lack the push and energy required to build up a fine herd of dairy cattle. They are poor business-men.

The cow cannot turn all of her energy into the production of milk and still have enough to build up her offspring rightly. To raise good, vigorous calves, we must see to it that the mother has sufficient of the right kind of food and goes dry long enough to do the work rightly.

DEEP LITTER FEEDING.

A Western doctor who had a fine

"Since his theft and forgery."

"You mean since the accusation of it? You know—you who have known Allan so long—you must know that he is innocent of such a thing!" she cried, passionately.

"Believe me, dear Miss Foster," he said, in a tone of quiet assurance, "I honor you for your faith in him, and only regret that I can no longer share it. But, unfortunately, I have no choice left—in face of this." He drew an envelope out from his pocket. "I received this about half an hour ago, with the request that after reading it I would give it your father. It is Allan's confession!"

The color slowly drained from the girl's face, leaving it white and strained.

"Allan's confession!" she gasped. "You—you have got—a written confession from him? Surely there is some mistake! You cannot mean that Allan has confessed to—"

She broke off suddenly, as if the words choked her.

"I'm afraid there is no mistake, Miss Foster. His confession is here—written by himself. I was only waiting for your father's return to give it to him as Allan desired."

He carefully sealed and held out the letter towards her.

"It almost looks as if Mr. Foster were not coming now, so perhaps you will take it to him."

There was a look as of a wounded animal in Maisie Foster's eyes as she stepped out into the road and absently took her seat in the waiting car.

Still in a half-dazed fashion she alighted at the door of her home and walked with heavy, dragging footsteps along the wide hall. But as she began to ascend the stairs she was arrested by the sound of voices.

Pushing open the door of the room when the sound had come she entered abruptly.

"That you, Maisie?" cried her father, cheerfully, as he caught sight of her. "Sorry to have disappointed you, my dear, but you must blame Marshall here, though I know his unexpected visit will more than compensate you."

"Of course. I am pleased to see you, Dr. Marshall."

Her father, quick to notice any change in his cherished daughter, looked at her keenly.

"Are you not well, child?"

Ignoring his question, she held out the fateful missive.

Without a word Mr. Foster tore open the envelope and began to read, the girl standing by watching him, dry-eyed, but white and wan-looking.

Her father looked up quickly.

"How did you get this, Maisie? Who gave it to you?"

"Mr. Barrington. He said he had received it this afternoon, with a request from Allan that he would give it to you."

He continued to read rapidly, his face growing slowly pale. As he finished he turned excitedly to his friend.

"Marshall, come with me! There's not a moment to lose. Is the motor still there, Maisie?"

For answer the girl flung herself upon him desperately.

"Don't, father, don't! Have mercy—oh, have some mercy upon Allan!" she cried. "Don't prosecute him. Dear, dear father, listen to me!"

"Maisie, I must go at once!" he exclaimed imperatively. "Hush,

No, he was not flinging his life away in wanton wastefulness. It was for love's sake.

Slowly, but with hands that no longer trembled, he raised the packet to his lips and, throwing his head back, steadily emptied the contents into his mouth, to the last tiny grain.

"Now for the couch and—sleep," he muttered.

He half staggered as he crossed the room and flung himself down.

A moment later two men burst into the room, and, crossing swiftly to the couch, bent over Allan's unconscious form.

"Thank God, we are not too late!" cried Mr. Foster. "He still breathes! Marshall, you can save him! You can surely use an antidote!"

Laying his fingers lightly on the still beating pulse, the doctor sniffed the man's breath curiously—a strained, puzzled look on his face. Presently his features relaxed, and he straightened himself with a gesture of relief.

"This is not poisoning," he said, quickly. "Only the effects of a potent drug for inducing sleep; and, fortunately, harmless enough."

"You really think so?" cried Mr. Foster, bending eagerly forward.

"I feel sure of it! And I don't think it will hold him long; his mind would be in too excited a state before he took it."

The moments dragged by slowly, painfully, to the two men watching in anxious silence; but at last, with a restless movement, Allan flung himself over and sighed.

The doctor held up a warning hand as his companion made an eager movement.

A few moments later the doctor, as Allan moved again, poured out a restorative and held it to his lips.

Still with closed eyes the young man drank; then, opening them suddenly, gazed stupidly at the faces peering anxiously into his.

"You will be good to—her—to Maisie!" he said, dreamily.

"Allan! Allan, my boy! Don't you know me?" cried Mr. Foster.

The young man made an effort to rouse himself.

"Listen, Allan!" said Mr. Foster imperatively. "I know the truth. Your innocence is established!"

With a startled cry Allan raised his head.

"You—know the truth!" he gasped, stupidly.

"Yes. Barrington sent me the wrong note—whether by way of warning or by mistake I don't know; but—I've read your letter to him."

Allan put his hand to his head with a helpless gesture, as if still uncertain whether to believe this a reality, or just a dream come to mock him.

"Maisie is waiting for you, Allan," said Mr. Foster, cunningly. "I promised her I would take you home with me."

"Maisie!" He started up in alarm. "Ah! She does not know? She must not know!"

Mr. Foster laid a soothing hand on his arm.

"You have made a great mistake, Allan. It is you whom Maisie loves, you dear, noble fellow; not Barrington, thank God!"

"Maisie—loves—me? I have made a mistake?" echoed Allan, incredulously. Then, with a sudden cry of anguish, he exclaimed, "Too late! Too late! If you have read my letter you will know what I have done. I am poisoned! And for both. The natural born liar when we have come to know him we discount, and we are liable to be tender to those who come under the lash of the ruthless truth teller.

"I suppose that most people are not liars; their conscience or the fear of consequences makes them tell the truth; but I dare say that with most of us there are times when we are disposed to lie, and whether lying is ever justifiable is a problem with which mortals have wrestled since codes of morals were first invented. I haven't settled this in my own mind yet, but I know that there are times when the truth would inflict needless pain. I fancy that we most of us in such a situation are governed as to what we shall do by our opinion as to whether or not a lie so told would ever be found out by the person lied to as to the effect upon him then of such discovery.

"This is a complicated question, and as far as I am concerned any lying that may seem to be necessary or wise in such circumstances I always leave to somebody else to do, for one reason, because I am myself such a poor liar. I can't tell a lie without revealing plainly in face and manner that what I am saying is a lie. I am a most bungling liar, while I have known persons who could lie with an air that inspired perfect confidence.

"But these have been usually persons who lied in what they believed to be a good cause, whose lies, if any can be called so, were harmless; persons who lied to spare others; and who would have cut off their hands rather than tell a mean or malicious lie that would cause others pain.

"At the same time, to be a successful liar of any sort one must be peculiarly constituted; he need not be without a conscience, but I should say that he would need to have his conscience more or less under control; not necessarily stifled, but controlled. I am not speaking here of the base liars whom we generally know, but of those gentle liars who would not harm a fly, but who might lie for what they believed to be a good purpose, and who, though far better than we, can lie far more successfully.

"Curiously constituted we certainly are, and as we journey through life, confronted by many problems, there may be occasions when we are tempted to say things that are not so; but we are most of us pretty poor liars, and really the only safe and right way for us all I suppose, is to stick to the truth always; though that may at times be hard for the liars natural born."

A worthy and provident man went to his legal adviser to make his will. He gave many instructions, and it seemed that everything was arranged. The lawyer began to read over his notes, and put a point to his client. "Oh—you have made provision for your wife in the event of her surviving you. Does that remain unaltered if she should marry again?" "No, no," said the client, eagerly. "What am I leaving her? One thousand dollars a year. If she marries again make it $2,000." The lawyer thought there must be a misunderstanding, and pointed out that most men put it the other way about. "I know," said the client, "but the man who takes her will deserve it."

to it that the mother has sufficient of the right kind of food and goes dry long enough to do the work rightly.

DEEP LITTER FEEDING.

A Western doctor who had a fine flock of hens; but whose hours were so irregular that he could not feed them at stated times, writes that he has found this method to give entire satisfaction.

For this sort of feeding a layer of litter is first spread over the floor and then a layer of grain such as cracked corn or wheat, then another of grain, alternating until the mass is from six to eight inches deep.

Young chickens attack this heap vigorously, and often dig out square holes clear down to the bottom in their search for grain.

This continual digging gives them plenty of exercise and, as a rule, they thrive excellently.

In some experiments made in this matter, litter-fed chicks actually gained much more than those fed by hand, although both lots were fed exactly the same rations, and the hand-fed birds received all they could eat and at all times.

If the litter is kept perfectly dry it does not become foul, because the constant movement of it by the chickens keeps it well aired and no unpleasant odor results.

SILAGE FOR SHEEP.

It is believed that greater care must be had in preparing silage for sheep than for cattle. Sheep require a sweet and dry silage. Thickly planted corn cut before it is well matured, does not make ideal silage for sheep. Corn planted about like field corn, harvested and put into the silo when it begins to dent, has proven very healthful to sheep, and they have done well upon it. If clover hay is fed in conjunction with this silage, cheap and satisfactory gains may be made in sheep fattening.

A certain learned professor enjoys a good joke, and his pupils often come to him when they have heard a new one.

Such was the case when one of the students came to him and said: "Professor, wouldn't you like a good recipe for catching rabbits?"

"Why, yes," replied the Professor. "What is it?"

"Well, you just crouch down behind a thick stone wall, and make a noise like a turnip."

Quick as a flash came the reply: "Oh, a better way than that would be for you to go and sit quietly in a bed of cabbage and look natural."

A long-winded, prosy counsellor was arguing a technical case recently before one of the Judges of the Superior Court. He had drifted along in such a desultory way that it was hard to keep track of what he was trying to present, and the Judge had just vented a very suggestive yawn. "I sincerely trust that I am not unduly trespassing on the time of this court," said the lawyer, with a suspicion of sarcasm in his voice. "There is some difference," the Judge quietly observed, "between trespassing on time and encroaching on eternity."

The Earl of Aberdeen is one of six noblemen now living who have filled the post of Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland—the others are Lords Londonderry, Zetland, Crewe, Cadogan, and Dudley. Lord Aberdeen is the only nobleman now living who has been twice Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

MEN WHO LIVE BY ESPOINAGE

HALF THE WORLD IS SPYING ON THE OTHER.

The Natural Sequence of Work Done by "Intelligence" Departments.

There has been a curious display of indignation in Germany over "British espionage" in connection with the trial of Capt. Trenchard Lieut. Brandon, which took place at Leipzig recently, writes the Berlin correspondent of the London Express.

The uninitiated might gather that from this attitude the impression that Germany herself employs no spies and abhors all secret methods of procuring information about the naval and military matters of other powers. But it would be a false impression, because Germany spies on her neighbors, and they spy on her, and so on through all the military powers of Europe. From a well-informed source I have received the following particulars of the methods of espionage employed by Continental powers:

Espionage is the natural sequence of al spies, it has frequently been necessary for intelligence departments to employ one set of secret service agents to watch those who actually engage in the work of espionage, a very costly method of procedure. Cases are also on record where spies, while serving their own Government, have at the same time betrayed their own country by simultaneously supplying secret information to another power.

Some years ago it was found that the director of an Austrian railway had been betraying military secrets to the Russian Government, and his contributions to the knowledge collected in St. Petersburg regarding Austrian military affairs was considered so valuable that he went in and out of the Russian War Office as freely as if it were his own home.

While doing so he exploited his opportunities to obtain information about Russian military plans, which he sold to Austria. He carried on this double treachery for nearly five years before his operations were discovered and he is NOW LIVING LUXURIOUSLY on the profits of his espionage in a third country.

By way of verifying the work of professional spies, three of four different secret service agents are sometimes instructed with the

RETORTS OF THE POLITICIANS

A FEW ECHOES FROM RECENT BRITISH ELECTIONS.

A Collection of Anecdotes Which May Give Hints to Public Speakers.

At a meeting in Liverpool during the last British general election a candidate was eloquently appealing for the support of his audience. Suddenly a raucous voice bellowed forth, "I'd rather vote for the devil."

Swiftly but sweetly came the retort, "Yes, but, as your champion is not standing, may I not rely upon your vote?" This not only brought down the house, but secured a convert.

From the centre of the hall the eulogy of the candidate was interrupted with the remark, "I never saw a bigger fool in my life."

"Then go home and look in the glass," was the instant rejoinder, which set the meeting in a roar. The laughter increased as amidst cries of "He's going," the discomfited interrupter got up and left the hall.

At another meeting an elector was unkind enough to hurl an ancient egg at the candidate who was speaking. It missed its intended victim and struck the wall, its malodorous character at once becoming evident.

The candidate paused for a moment, looked at the bespattered wall, and then at

following this up with the remark, "Can you wonder that the Opposition fail, seeing that their aim is as rotten as their arguments?"

Talking of eggs is remindful of the reply given by the late Sir Henry Havelock-Allan to the thrower of an egg at an election meeting. In this instance the aim was truer than in the previous one, for the egg struck Sir Henry on the neck.

Pausing in his speech and fixing his gaze on that part of the hall from which the egg had been thrown the candidate smilingly exclaimed, "I say, friend, the hen that laid that egg had very bad breath."

The disturbing powers of one man with a big voice at a political meeting are great. This was well illustrated at Glasgow, where, seated in the centre of a group of his sympathizers in the middle of a long seat, a man would persist in interjecting remarks.

The meeting, indeed, was on the point of proving a fiasco through his sallies, when suddenly a voice rang out from the platform, "Shut up, Smith, or I'll send for your wife." The audience simply roared, but none so much as the interrupter's own particular supporters.

Well they might, too, for nobody knew better than they what a terror Smith's wife was in her own territory, or how she was dreaded by her noisy spouse. He collapsed at once, so the hint conveyed in a note to the chairman was the means of

SAVING THE SITUATION.

At the 1906 election a speaker was addressing an audience in the chester in January last conducted his campaign on genial lines. At one of his meetings he had been sorely put to it by the hecklers. Oranges, said one of them, came from Spain for the most part, NOT FROM OUR COLONIES.

"Now, if you put an import tax on oranges it will not do our colonies any good; and moreover—"

The man was going on at great length when the Captain stopped him.

"Say," he said, regarding his heckler genially, "what as awful nuisance you must be to your friends?"

The chairman of a Liberal association in the East of Scotland, who is also a landlord proprietor in the county, was presiding over a rather turbulent audience. Number one, a flourishing commission agent with a rubicund countenance, got up and in an angry tone said to the chairman:—

"Don't you think I pay as much in the way of taxes as you do?"

"Perhaps you do," said the last-named gentleman: "but if there was a tax on lemonade I might beat you there."

SEWING UP A HEART.

Remarkable Operation Described by New York Surgeon.

Dr. John F. Erdmann, of New York, describes in The Medical Record the case of a man, 21 years old, who received a stab wound in the heart, and upon whom he operated. The patient made a complete recovery. The man, who is called "S. H.," was a waiter in a restaurant, and he received the wound in a fight there on Aug. 22 last. The blade of the weapon used was three-quarters of an inch wide, and six inches long. "S. H." knocked his assailant down after he had been stabbed.

"I saw the patient at 10.30 or 10.45," says Dr. Erdmann, "practically three and a half hours after the injury, and was told that in the interval between his entering the hospital and my seeing him, he had a transfusion of 500 cubic centimetres of salt solution.

"His condition at the time I saw him was one of profound shock, marked pallor, the pulse uncountable, and almost imperceptible, dyspnea, rapid and shallow breathing, cold perspiration, and semi-consciousness. The heart sounds were distant and almost imperceptible. The patient complained of constant abdominal pain."

Dr. Erdmann describes the exploration of the wound to discover the extent of the injury, resulting in the discovery that the liver had been forced four inches out of place, and that there was a hole in the right ventricle of the heart admitting a gloved finger.

A curved needle, threaded with plain cat gut, was placed down to the heart, he says, and during a systole (contraction) puncture was made, irrespective of penetrating the cavity or not. As soon as the needle had pierced one side of the incision the finger was withdrawn and the needle made to make its exit from the opposite side. A knot was tied and the heart held dangling from this suture. The subsequent stitches—eight or ten in number—were readily placed, one more being placed in the line of the heart wound proper, and two more rows placed. A long drain was placed.

on her neighbors, and they spy on her, and so on through all the military powers of Europe. From a well-informed source I have received the following particulars of the methods of espionage employed by Continental powers:

Espionage is the natural sequence of the work done by the intelligence department, which is intrusted with the task of collecting generally accessible information about the military affairs of other countries. It must be remembered that very many details about the army and navy of each country are published in the press of that country, and can thus be obtained without any difficulty by collecting the newspaper cuttings of parliamentary papers in question.

NEWSPAPER SPIES.

Every Continental intelligence department maintains a staff of newspaper readers, who have to peruse all the publications on naval and military subjects in all the civilized countries of the world. In this way all the particulars of naval and military estimates and many details of new battleships or fortifications or other preparations for war are gathered and classified under their respective heads.

It frequently happens that information of this kind, which is generally accessible to any vigilant watcher, suggests the need of more complete knowledge on some particular subject, and then espionage begins to supplement the operations of the intelligence department.

Supposing, for instance, that some newspaper report contains the information that new fortifications are to be constructed at some new strategic point, one or more Secret Service agents are insinuated to obtain supplementary details concerning the plan of the new works, with the armament with which they will be supplied. Similar efforts are made in the case of new battleships and other military preparations.

ALL SORTS OF MEN.

are employed in operations of espionage; they include broken-down noblemen, bankrupt business men, professional workers who have lost their means of sustenance, retired civil service officials, and so forth. Women, too, are employed in very many cases where it is thought that they can ferret out information which would be less accessible to male spies.

The work of professional spies is supplemented by actual missions undertaken by military and naval officers, who obtain leave of absence for the purpose of getting important information on some subject of particular interest to their own Government. The employment of officers for such duties is often desirable owing to the utter unreliability of professional spies many of whom are entirely devoid of technical knowledge and are thus badly equipped for the task of collecting useful information, while those of them who have held commissions in some army or navy frequently utilize their own knowledge of military and naval subjects to invent stories which are quite untrue, but which serve to justify their existence.

DOG EAT DOG.

Owing to the unconscious or deliberate unreliability of profession-tion, because of the fact that they are discovered and he is NOW LIVING LUXURIOUSLY on the profits of his espionage in a third country.

By way of verifying the work of professional spies, three or four different secret service agents are sometimes intrusted with the same task, while one or two more are ordered to watch them and check their results. It is a great mistake to suppose that a military power only practises espionage to obtain information about countries with which it expects to become involved in hostilities.

Quite the contrary is the case because every intelligence department collects information about the allies of its own country without considering the political situation or the probability of war, so that the fact that the spies of one country operating in the territory of another by no means indicates any unfriendly intentions. It is merely the duty of every intelligence department to be accurately informed regarding the naval and military resources of every possible future enemy, even if the possibility be very remote.

CLEARING OUT THE SLUMS.

What it Costs to Clear Them or Leave Them.

Clearing out the slums of London is very costly, but also very necessary, work. It is necessary because the conscience of a Christian city cannot tolerate the misery, nor the understanding of an intelligent city permit a continuance of the danger, engendered by these plague areas. It is costly because London will not enforce the laws against overcrowding and bad sanitation. In Liverpool the municipality compels the owners to make their premises habitable and healthy at their own cost. In London overcrowding and dirt are permitted until the authorities must step in and clear the whole district at the public charge. A case in point is the Tabard street area. Something must be done there. Thirty-seven people die in every thousand every year, equivalent to the highest death rate in England, and nearly three times that of London as a whole. Six persons in the thousand die of epidemic diseases, against less than two for the whole of London. The London County Council must clear this area because it has become a plague area. Most of the streets end in a blank wall; some are in places only three feet wide; the houses are damp, dark and dilapidated. Then comes in the question of cost. The County Council's valuer puts the price at $1,800,000 for the area of 20 or 25 acres covered with squalid houses. Forty thousand dollars an acre, and $1,750 apiece for houses which originally cost perhaps $750. The owner of first-class property, healthy and beautiful, could hardly hope to do as well. The worse the property is the more profitable it is—that is the general rule. Slums can be overcrowded, and overcrowding means high rents, and no expense worth speaking of for repairs.

SAVING THE SITUATION.

At the 1906 election a speaker was addressing an audience in the North of England. In the course of his speech he happened to put his hands in his pocket, whereupon "a rude fellow of the baser sort" shouted from among the audience, "Take your hand out of your pocket."

The speaker, however, kept it there, quietly replying, "I put my hand into my pocket; the interrupter is, perhaps, too fond of putting his into other people's." There was no further interruption from that quarter, and the audience were hugely delighted.

To be strictly impartial, one should quote some instances where the laugh was with the interrupter. It was very much so in the case of a candidate who was wooing a certain constituency in the provinces.

In illustration of his great devotion to truth, the would-be M.P. stated at one of his election meetings that he underwent a thrashing when a boy for telling the truth. Imagine the sickly feeling which came over him when a gruff voice called out from the centre of the audience, "I guess it's cured yer, guv'nor!"

Almost as damaging was an interruption of which Sir William Temple was at one election meeting the victim. He had come straight from his duties in India to become a candidate for this particular seat, and proceeded to tell the meeting of the fact.

He remarked that he had "travelled 8,000 miles and surrendered £5,000 for the privilege of contesting and, he hoped, representing this great constituency."

The statement seemed likely to carry great weight with the audience until the whole effect was spoilt by some merciless wag amongst them suddenly shouting out,

"OH, WHAT A FOOL!"

A certain Unionist candidate, holding a meeting in Auld Reekie in January, at which the heckler was much in evidence, failed to give a single answer which was judged to be satisfactory by his audience. Towards the end of the meeting a canny elector rose and quietly asked:—

"Sir, would you tell us what might be the name your second initial stands for?"

The unfortunate candidate, greatly puzzled at the purport of the question, asked in what way might that interest the audience.

"Just to see if you could answer one question, anyway," came the reply—and the resolution was negatived amidst much laughter.

Of the few nippy retorts that lent zest to the last general election, one is credited to Sir Robert Cranston. An elector of somewhat pompous bearing was heckling the genial knight, and a section of the audience made no attempt to suppress their feelings.

"I must be heard," shouted the consequential gentleman, "for I belong to the town."

"That may be," responded Sir Robert: "but the town doesn't belong to you."

Captain Ward-Jackson, who unsuccessfully contested South Manand the needle made to make its exit from the opposite side. A knot was tied and the heart held dangling from this suture. The subsequent stitches—eight or ten in number—were readily placed, one more being placed in the line of the heart wound proper, and two more rows placed. A long drain was placed, and the patient was back in bed in about thirty minutes.

The patient was out of bed on the fourteenth day, and was discharged on Sept. 30, having been kept in the hospital simply to prevent his undergoing any undue exercise or labor.

NEEDS HAPPINESS FOR SELF.

Self-sacrifice Too Often in Life of Wife and Mother.

Charles Reade says that instead of the perpetual preaching women get about unselfishness, they need continual holding back from self-sacrifice. Is it not true that, as a rule, wives and mothers neglect themselves far too much? Too often the pleasant room, the appetizing delicacy, the becoming suit, even the tender care and sympathy in hours of pain, are only hers to give, not to have. How adroit she is in securing the poor potato and the burned biscuit! How quickly the parlor fire is smothered and the lights extinguished when others no longer need the room!

"If she is happy in doing it," you ask, "is not that enough?"

No; she should be led to enjoy "the pursuit of happiness" for herself. "By self-sacrifice she defeats her own ends, storing up anguish instead of joy for her dear ones."

Many a good motto have I seen on the walls of both hall and cottage, but never one to express what a young husband recently said on bringing his bride to the new home: "The first comfort of this house must be your comfort, health and happiness."

PAYMENT OF MEMBERS.

A statement has been circulated to the effect that the British Government proposes in its Payment of Members Bill to fix the salary at $2,500 per annum. The idea at first was that $1,500 should be the amount, but it has been urged since that that is altogether inadequate, inasmuch as no man can possibly meet the ordinary expenses of a Parliamentary session out of such an allowance. The House of Commons may be the best club in London; nevertheless it is, like all other things that come under the category of the best, an expensive place. It is suggested that the Laborists are likely to object to anything more than $2,000.

BONUS FOR TEMPERANCE.

Speaking of present conditions in Scotland recently, the Laird of Skibo told of distilleries lying idle. "Not a man on our estate," Mr. Carnegie declared, "not a butler, a gamekeeper or a chauffeur, even to the captain of our yacht, but he is a total abstainer. On the first of January each year, a bonus of 10 per cent. is paid to every employee of the estate who can truthfully say that he has not tasted liquor in the past twelve months except by order of his doctor. That is the most eloquent sermon for temperance that has ever been preached in Scotland."

PREY OF "LAND SHARKS"

THE TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE OF A NAVAL OFFICER.

Had to Swim Ashore With the Men Pursuing Him in a Boat.

On the 12th March, 1904, the Mediterranean Fleet arrived off Corfu, and the Admiral signalled, "Twenty-four hours' leave by watches; to commence on Monday, the 21st, at 7 a.m." Thus it came about that troops of bluejackets landed on the following Monday morning, and amongst those who set out to enjoy themselves was William Daniels, petty officer of H. M. S. Intrepid.

For hours he explored the town and surrounding country, and at last, finding it was very late, thought it advisable to seek lodging for the night. Being unable to find this, however, he decided to return to his ship, and going down to the quay, found some dozens of Greek and Italian boatmen clamoring for a fare. He selected a boat in charge of two Greeks, and, jumping in, told them to pull to the Intrepid. The boatmen were big, hulking fellows, dressed in rather loose, baggy trousers and open-fronted shirts, and, as ultimately transpired, both carried knives in their pockets.

SHOW THEIR COLORS.

After they had pushed off from the shore Daniels leaned back in the stern of the boat, lazily contemplating the hills in the distance. Suddenly he was brought to his bearings by seeing the two boatmen smartly unship their oars, and just as smartly each man drew a knife. Quick as thought they leapt into the stern of the boat and demanded the sailor's money. They then proceeded to rifle his pockets, during which unpleasant process Daniels sat perfectly still, offering no sort of resistance.

He realized that he had two desperate criminals to deal with. "This was the situation as it presented itself to me," Daniels said, when relating the incident afterwards. "The men, I knew, would not dare to land me alongside the Intrepid, for fear that I should have them detained. Furthermore, they could not put me ashore, because discovery would be equally sure there, and we should probably come across some of my shipmates. Evidently, then, they meant to kill me and dispose of my body. Desperate measures, it was evident, were necessary if I wished to save my life."

Having rifled his pockets, one of the men turned to his companion and said something in Greek. This was Daniels' opportunity. While the man had his back half turned towards him struck him a severe blow on the side of the face, and knocked him into the bottom of the boat. Then he turned his attention to the other man.

"As I made for him," said Daniels, "he thrust his knife savagely at my stomach—the spot for which ruffians of this class invariably aim. I caught the weapon with my

THE GREAT SPONGE HORROR

STARTLING ACTS REGARDING THE FISHERIES.

Most Dangerous of Occupations—Men Are Robbed and Abused.

When daily using the sponge, how many people are there who are aware of the fact that possibly the price of that sponge is a man's life? One of the most dangerous of occupations is that followed by the men who gather sponges.

The best of sponges are those coming from the Levant, where some 5,000 men are kept busily at work. It is in the early part of the spring that a tremendous amount of activity is apparent among three or four of the chief islands of the Aegean, as it is then the sponge fleet start for the yearly cruise.

The sponges, of course, grow on rocks under the water, the best of all being obtained at the detached heads of rock in at least eight or ten fathoms of water. It is the object of the men to obtain these sponges without tearing them.

TORN OFF BY A GRAPNEL.

There are three ways of fishing for sponges adopted in the Levant. One is simply by tearing off the sponge with a sort of grapnel, though this is only used in the case of inferior sponges.

Another is by means of what is called the "Gungava," which is little else than an adaptation of the British dredge trawl. The trawl is triangular shaped, the bottom bar being sharpened so as to detach the sponges from the ground, while the movement of the boat naturally sends them into the bag slinging behind.

The third and most popular method is that of diving. The diver carries a heavy stone in his hands. He dives down, the weight of the stone helping him in his descent; having found a good sponge he tears it off, and then releases the weight. The lightness of his body causes him to float to the surface, leaving the weight at the bottom.

Many curious stories are related by the sponge fishers in connection with this diving. For instance, on one occasion a young diver found himself descending to the jaws of a shark. With great presence of mind he allowed the stone to fall into the shark's mouth, while he skilfully turned round and ascended to the surface.

To-day, however, the old order of things has passed away, as the advent of the diving dress has altered everything. Huge syndicates are now operating in the fisheries, and an extraordinary state of affairs extends throughout the industry. There is a state of corruption in connection with the sponge fishery which is not realized and which is a disgrace to civilization.

DIVERS THROWN OVERBOARD.

It is well known that in diving at great depths the descent must be gradual in order to allow the body to become accustomed to the pressure of the water. When the diving dress was introduced, the Greeks found that whereas a man previously could only stay in the water for a minute to a minute and a half, he could now remain for

WILL BE / 6 AT CENSUS

THAT IN GREAT BRITAIN ON SUNDAY, APRIL 2.

Numbering King George's Subjects Will Be a Gigantic Task.

Once more the fiat has gone forth for the numbering of the King's subjects, on Sunday April 2. The necessary Census Acts—one for Great Britain, the other for Ireland—have been published, and after resting from its labors for nearly ten years the great census-taking machinery has begun to work again, and will know no rest from its labors for considerably more than a year.

More than a century ago it was no easy task to count the King's subjects, when there were fewer than 9,000,000 persons in England. Now that the population has grown fourfold, and to-day is, as nearly as possible, 38,000,000, its vastness requires no pointing out.

AN ARMY OF ENUMERATORS.

Already the whole country is flooded with tens of thousands of circulars and letters—to the local authorities, enjoining them to see that the naming and numbering of every street is in "apple pie order" before the fatal day of the census, so that the work of the enumerators may be made as simple as possible; and to the thousands of superintendent registrars, requiring them to arrange in good time for the services of a vast army of enumerators, whose number for Great Britain alone will exceed 40,000. All this naturally leads to a deluge of correspondence—letters by tens of thousands, each of which must be carefully considered and answered.

A most intricate and difficult work is the division of the country into enumeration districts, so that no part of it, however minute, may be excluded from the survey, and so that each district shall be within the compass of one man's labor for a day. It is found in practice that in towns a district comprising about two hundred houses is large enough for one enumerator to tackle, while, in the country, a district involving a fifteen mile walk is the measure of his powers, and into tens of thousands of such sections the whole area of the country must be mapped out.

MILLIONS OF SCHEDULES.

For this purpose it is calculated that 20,000 reams of paper have to be specially manufactured, and something like 9,500,000 schedules printed.

Later these millions of schedules will be sent to every point of the compass, to the superintendent registrars, who in turn will distribute them amongst the heads of their sub districts, to be kept until a week before the census day. Then they will be handed out to the forty thousand or more enumerators, each of whom will distribute them in his special district, noting the delivery of each schedule in a book provided for the purpose.

On the 3rd of April all the schedules will be collected, with their many questions duly answered; if any assistance is required in filling

BERLIN'S AWFUL POVERTY

A REGISTER OF THOSE OUT OF WORK.

Increase in Number of Beggars and Consumption of Horse Meat.

A report of H. J. Bruce, Third Secretary to the British Embassy at Berlin, bearing upon the conditions of life in the Kaiser's capital, is being reproduced by the Socialist press as it contains figures not yet compiled by the German Government. An interesting feature of the report is the number of unemployed, compiled by a political party. Two other features are the increase of beggary and of the consumption of horse meat.

The census of the unemployed obtained from the district schools by the Government has been declared to be erroneous. In last January, the municipality declined the gratuitous assistance of 24,000 organized workmen offered them by the Social Democratic organization to make a house-to-house visitation. Thereupon the organization decided to make its own census. On Feb. 13, 1909, 40,000 workmen visited the houses of all the organized workmen in Berlin and forty-four suburbs, and made a register of those out of work. The total number amounted to 101,300. (Berlin, 67,367; suburbs, 33,933). This shows a discrepancy between the two censuses of about 76,000—a discrepancy that can partly be explained by the fact that as the Social Democratic census took place on the 13th many workmen declined to register again at the Bureau of the Municipality on the 17th. Further, under the municipal system, those out of work had to proceed to the offices to register their names. Thousands refused to do this, as they preferred using the time to find occupation at the labor exchanges or elsewhere. Others knew nothing about the census.

INCREASE IN VAGRANTS.

A considerable increase in the number of vagrants charged with begging in Berlin took place during 1909, when the depression in German industry and trade had become less acute. Here are the figures for three consecutive years:

Beggars.
1907	16,998
1908	16,989
1909	18,088

There was also during the year 1909 a large increase in the number of horses and donkeys slaughtered for food. These figures, taken from the Imperial statistical returns, are absolutely reliable, as no meat is allowed to be sold in Germany that has not passed through the examiners' hands, and that does not bear the official stamp:

Horses and Donkeys.
1906	147,424
1907	136,273
1908	137,947
1909	151,357

The animals killed for zoological gardens are not to be found in any official German report. It is obviously included in the figures given in this report, as horseflesh con-great depths the descent must be gradual in order to allow the body to become accustomed to the pressure of the water. When the diving dress was introduced, the Greeks found that whereas a man previously could only stay in the water for a minute to a minute and a half, he could now remain for half an hour.

The owners were unwilling to waste the time which should be allowed for the descent when diving is carried on under proper conditions. Instead, therefore, of lowering a man a fathom a minute they decided to throw him overboard, allowing him to sink like a log. So general is this disgraceful state of affairs that about eighty per cent. of the sponge divers suffer from paralysis, eventually total paralysis being their fate. One would imagine that in a civilized country, either the Government would have adopted some measures to prevent this, or that the divers themselves would have shown themselves reluctant to undertake such a hazardous profession. Such, however, is not the case. It should be mentioned to the credit of the infidel Turks that Turkey has forbidden the use of the diving dress for sponge fishing.

DECOYED OUT TO SEA.

A few days preceding the departure of the sponge fleet a lamentable spectacle is provided. The divers, like the gladiators of old, are aware that they may never see their native shores again, so they go in for a course of unrestrained debauchery in which they are encouraged by the huge prepayments which are given them as bribes for their services.

It is commonly understood that a diver will receive 3,000 drachmas (about $500) for the summer fishing, 1,500 of which he will be paid before he sails. He gathers unto him his boon companions, and after three or four nights of drunkenness wakes up with a splitting headache to find that he is already far out at sea, with the prospect of serving under a ruffianly master and never getting the remainder of his pay.

To do the captains justice, if they can be said to deserve such, we must admit that they themselves are oppressed by the syndicates, who let out the diving suits with provisions and nets at an exorbitant rate of interest, so that it is practically impossible for the man to secure anything but the smallest profit. If they paid their men full wages they would speedily be ruined.

One may wonder that the men do not mutiny against the ill-treatment, but it must be remembered that the skipper, or maestro, as they call him, is always accompanied by a number of his cousins, or near relations, who are always well armed, and so have the whip hand.—Pearson's Weekly.

Kind Lady (at children's party)—"Well, my little man, and what are you going to be when you grow up?" The Little Man (tugging at uncomfortable neckwear)—"Some-fan what don't wear a collar."

An amusing blunder was made in the case of an Irish judicial declaration that certain resident magistrates "could no more stute a case than they could write a Greek ode." This was made to read that the magistrates "could no more state a case than they could ride a Greek goat."

ty thousand or more enumerators, each of whom will distribute them in his special district, noting the delivery of each schedule in a book provided for the purpose.

On the 3rd of April all the schedules will be collected, with their many questions duly answered; if any assistance is required in filling up the form the enumerator's duty is to give it. But his work by no means ends here, although he will probably have well earned the money by this time. He must further copy the entries in the schedules into his enumeration book, and make an abstract of them in a form showing the total number of persons, males and females, the number of houses, and so on."

This task completed, the superintendent registrars despatch their thousands of bundles of material to the Pimlico headquarters, where a largely augmented staff of clerks wrestles with them, gradually evolving from seemingly chaos those wonderful tables of statistics which proclaim to the world all it wants to know about King George's subjects at home.

CLUB OF DEAF MEN.

Silence Reigns for Them No Matter What Goes On.

London, England, has at least one very peculiar club. That is the National Deaf Club, whose quarters are on Baker street, in the upper floors of an unpretentious house. All its members are deaf—most of them deaf from birth—and though the club may not be a club of silence, it is hardly a conversation club. The members play billiards, but don't hear the click of the balls; move the draughts, or the chessmen, but notice no resulting clatter; and one deaf steward may bang the kettle and rattle the cups; the deaf clubmen are not disturbed thereby.

The Club of the Deaf is for men, but at regular intervals there are ladies' nights. Then the deaf men and the deaf women sit and play cards and draughts together, and exchange jokes and flashes of wit in silence. Sometimes the deaf exchange laughter. A visitor who can hear listens to that laughter with a shock. But the laughter is never heard by the deaf themselves. The most they know of that laughter is a little tremor of their being.

Clubs are more usually for the exchange of ideas through conversation, but it is impossible not to think that this club of the deaf is the most real club in the world. It is a club which essentially involves companionship, friendship and understanding. It is a club which possesses a gift impossible to any other club in the world—the freemasonry of silence.

"Good morning, Bridget, hope your master and mistress have not forgotten that they're coming to dine with me to-night." "Indeed and they've not—they've ordered a good hearty meal at home at six o'clock."

"What is the meaning of this, sir?" inquired an employer sternly. "Asleep at your desk before midday?" "I—I'm extremely sorry, sir," answered the offending clerk, "but my baby has kept me awake all night." "Indeed! Then you had better bring the child here to-morrow, and perhaps it will keep you awake during the day, too!"

The animals killed for zoological gardens are not to be found in any official German report. It is obviously included in the figures given in this report, as horseflesh consumed in zoos would not be weighed. The statement that no food is sold in Germany that has not passed through the examiners' hands applies only to meat sold for human consumption.

ARMY BALLOONS.

Long List of Fatalities Will Not Deter Trials in England.

Progressive development in connection with the army balloon school and the army balloon factory go to prove that the long list of aerial fatalities in 1910 will not deter the military authorities from pushing on with the formation and extension of the Army Air Corps. Both the Beta and Gamma airships are ready for commission, and the Lebaudy, which ripped while entering the balloon shed a few months ago, has been restored. Although Salisbury Plain will furnish the chief flying grounds for heavier-than-air machines, the scope offered for short practice flights on the Long Valley and Mattan's Plain is evidently not to be ignored. A Farman biplane has just been delivered to the balloon school on Falsborough Common. This is the third type of aeroplane which has been added to the stock at Farnsborough, for the original Wright machine presented by Mr. Rolls was supplemented a few weeks ago by an original biplane, the invention of a young civilian now enrolled on the balloon factory staff. Several officers have returned from Continental schools possessed of flying certificates.

KAISER'S SLY GAME.

German Menace Against England Is Only a Feint.

Sir Oliver Lodge, the distinguished scientist, sees right through Emperor William's schemes. He is absolutely certain the Kaiser's fleet is not meant to fight England. "Some people," said Mrs. Poyer, "can see through a barn door. Maybe that's the reason they see so little on this side of it." And what Sir Oliver told the University of Birmingham Debating Society, seems far-fetched. "I ask you to be on your guard against the newspaper enterprise which tries to foment warlike feelings between this country and a friendly neighbour country. The German aims at not piracy and robbery against England. I think it is a port at the Mediterranean and a port at the Adriatic that they want, not the Austrian Empire is breaking up, so that they may be more easily colonize the North Coast of Africa. I take it that the German Emperor's navy is to overawe and prevent any opposition on the part of France, and especially Italy, who would no doubt dislike having Germany so near as a neighbor. But so long as Europe thinks the navy is directed against England he is quite pleased, because that is the real intention, and the Germans do not wish to declare what is their real intention."

At New York, on Wednesday, a cargo of dynamite in transit from a freight car to the hold of a lighter moored at pier 7, Communipaw, New Jersey, exploded at just one minute past noon. In the widespread ruin that followed how many were injured will never be known. The estimated dead is placed at thirty-two and the injured at three hundred. The property damage is estimated at about a million dollars.

Copy from Winnipeg Free Press, Oct. 14th, 1910—"The Royal Welsh Ladies Choir," will sing at the Central Methodist church, Winnipeg. General admission $1.00. No reserved seats. Madame Melba, on Tuesday evening, at the Central Methodist Church, noticing an advertisement of the Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir, said: "The Welsh choir is magnificent and I should like to hear them again. They are perfectly splendid, and you may say I said so." These talented singers may be heard at the Brisco Opera House, Napanee, on Monday evening, Feb. 13th, under the auspices of Napanee Ladies Musical Club. Admission 50 cents.

A most enjoyable concert was given in the Western Methodist Church on Tuesday evening of last week, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid. The Elocutionist of the evening Miss Wellington of Brighton pleased her audience in every number. The musical part of the programme was of the highest order, and every number was enjoyed to the full by the audience. The two numbers by the Ladies Sextette were very much enjoyed as were also the violin solos of Mrs. Cameron Wilson. The organ solos of Mrs. Cairns Smith and Mrs. B. Black were of the highest order. The work of Miss Emsley and Mrs. Black as Accompanists left nothing to be desired. The Ladies are very thankful indeed to those who gave such valuable assistance in rendering the programme such an enjoyable one and also the Church choir whose opening Chorus was much appreciated.

The Dominion Government has called for tenders for the construction of the ten new vessels of the Canadian navy, contemplated in the initial building programme, viz., four Bristols and six destroyers of the latest improved type. The plans and specifications are based on the plans received from the Admiralty last fall and embraced the very latest advances in naval science. The tenders are not publicly advertised, since following the rule of the Admiralty, details have to be kept secret, and only firms in whom the department has confidence and who might be bonafide tenders, will have access thereto. Letters have been sent to all the leading British and Canadian firms who are in a position to tender, inviting them to inspect the plans and put in tenders. It is stipulated that all the vessels must be built in Canada. Tenders must be in by April next.

Bath, Maine, took place on Tuesday morning, January 31st, Rev. G. W. McColl officiating. The bride was married in her travelling suit of blue chiffon cloth with cream lace blouse and navy hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Helen Grange, wore green embroidered satin and black hat with plumes and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Dr. Randall, of Lewiston, Maine, assisted Dr. Morin. After the wedding breakfast Dr. and Mrs. Morin left for Ottawa, Montreal and White Mountains, en route to Bath.

BOYLE & SON.

Obituary.

On January 18th, at the home of her step-son, Mr. Willet Pringle, Port Colborne, occurred the death of Mrs. Sarah Pringle, at the age of 83 years, 10 months and 13 days. Deceased was the second wife of the late Calvin D. Pringle, who predeceased her nine years ago on his farm near West Plain. About a year ago deceased went with her step-son to reside at Port Colborne, and was in her usual good health until two months ago when she weakened down, becoming weaker until finally she passed away. The remains were brought to Napanee and placed in the vault until arrangements could be made for the funeral, which took place at the Methodist Church, West Plain. Her remains were laid beside her husband in the family plot on the old farm. Deceased leaves one brother, Rev. Alexander Martin, of Belleville, and one sister, Mrs. Jas. A. Diamond, of Hayburn, besides four step son's, and three step-daughter's. The funeral was largely attended.

Mr. Harvey Warner.

In answer to the numerous enquiries regarding the condition of Mr. Harvey Warner, we are in a position to state to our readers, that while he is not recovering from the effects of the stroke as rapidly as his friends would wish, yet his medical attendant, Dr. Cowan, thinks he is improving as much as could be expected, and he has shown no unfavourable symptoms. He is bright and cheerful, is comparatively free from pain and his speech is unimpaired. The left arm and leg are paralyzed, but he is regaining some use of his arm, and it is hoped he will regain considerable use of both limbs.

Quarterly Meeting.

The Quarterly Official Board of the Yarker circuit, met in the Methodist Church Colebrook, on Monday Jan. 30th. A large delegation from each of the appointments were present to do honor to the President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, Rev. Mr. Emsley, who presided at the meeting. The financial returns were very satisfactory and encouraging being considerably in advance of any February meeting in the history of the Yarker circuit. The President complimented the board on the manner in which the business was conducted. After the regular business of the meeting was concluded the following resolution was submitted by the President and carried by a standing vote: Moved by Joseph Foster, Seconded by J. F. Connolly, Supported by H. A. Baker, John Goudy and Frank Martin. And resolved. That whereas, it is deemed expedient and in the interest of the Yarker Circuit to consider at this meeting of the Quarterly Official Board, the question of pulp supply, and having implicit confidence in the loyalty, zeal, and integrity, of our beloved Pastor, Rev. James Batstone, who came to us a stranger three years ago, and during the interval has labored faithfully, for the advancement of the Master's Kingdom, with the result that the Circuit has risen and temporally, and also in inaugurating the Local Option campaign, in this Municipality which resulted in such an overwhelming victory for the temperance cause, on the second of January. Be it therefore resolved, that this Quarterly Official Board extend to Rev. Mr. Batstone a cordial and most hearty invitation, to remain the Pastor of the Yarker Circuit for another conference year. Carried unanimously.

PERSONALS

The Misses Craig entertained their young friends on Friday last.

Honorable Justice C. D. Macaulay and Mrs. Macaulay, of Dawson, have been spending the past week with Mrs. Macaulay's brother, Mr. B. F. Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Madole and Mr. and Mrs. J. Young were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Sharp, Ernestown, last Tuesday.

Mrs. C. W. Bowen was in Cobourg on Wednesday attending the funeral of Mrs. G. A. Smith whose death occurred on Sunday last from pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Forsythe O'Neil and Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe Huffman, Moscow, spent Sunday the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. D. Vanalstine.

Mr. John Metzler went to Kingston on Monday and was operated upon in Kingston General Hospital on Tuesday morning. He is doing as well as could be expected.

Mrs. H. R. Jackson, Enterprise, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. T. V. Anderson has resigned his position as county road superintendent and accepted a position as traveller for the J. I. Case Co., Toronto.

Messrs. Dr. Ming and C. W. Neville attended the meeting of the Central Ontario Fairs' Association, at Belleville, on Tuesday, also the banquet given in the Hotel Quinte by the officers of the Belleville Fair.

Mrs. Dr. Leonard has been the guest of Miss Parker, Belleville, for a couple of weeks. Mrs. Leonard returned home early this week.

Miss Stella Douglas entertained a number of her friends to toboggan parties on Wednesday and Thursday

Mixed Motives.

"Few motives in this world can be pure. That is our great trouble," said a lecturer. "A clerk wept bitterly on the beach one stormy day while out on a boiling sea tossed a cockleshell of a fishing boat wherein sat his employer. As the clerk watched with wild eyes the little boat, now buried under white foam, now shooting forward gallantly, now buried again, he clasped his hands and cried in great anguish, 'If that boat sinks I'll lose my job.'"

Tibetan "Demonolatry."

The religion of the Tibetans is literally saturated with demonolatry, and their festivals take the form of ceremonies intended to propitiate various evil spirits and demons. Their devil dances—in which each performer represents some particular malignant spirit—are extremely curious.—Wide World Magazine.

Mercury and the Sun.

The distance of Mercury from the sun varies owing to the eccentricity of its orbit. When he is nearest to the sun he receives ten and a half times more light and heat than we do, but when he removes to his greatest distance the light and heat are reduced by more than one-half. Even then, however, the sun blazes in the skies of Mercury with a disk four and a half times larger than that which he shows to us on earth.

OPEN-MINDED DISCUSSION OF PUBLIC QUESTIONS

"A newspaper—not an organ."

The newspaper for the man who courts open-minded discussion on all public questions and who expects support of right—of justice—and of decency in the treatment of public affairs.

A newspaper with definite opinions on all political—social and moral questions—has the courage of its convictions—whose editorials are fair—broad-minded—honest—and written by some of the cleverest writers in Canadian Journalism to-day—just such a newspaper as an aggressive and intelligent Canadian people will enjoy and read with profit.

ICE BOAT RACES.

Interest in ice boating is reviving in this locality owing to good ice and little snow. There are several good boats on the ice this winter ; belonging to members of the Napanee Ice Yacht Club.

The best of the lot is the "Witch", a boat built to order by a Poughkeepsie firm for an enthusiast of the Kingston Y. C., at an expense of over $250. It was brought to Napanee by M. Getty and sold to Thos. Tierney, of the Reach, its present owner.

Next in order comes Skipper Mills' "Falcon," which for a home design and homemade craft, reflects considerable credit upon its owner, as it is a very speedy boat and has won the Club's Cup on more than one occasion.

Then comes the "Whistler," Morley Galt's new creation, and is owned by him at Gosport, and for a new boat is showing a good turn of speed, and is a very substantial looking craft, which after it is properly tuned up will have to be reckoned with when racing.

There are a few smaller crafts that have just made their appearance on the ice this winter and will make an interesting race when they get together. One built by Selwin Black, of Hay Bay, from designs by Percy Ashley, of Rudder fame, is a likely looking boat and will be heard from later on.

Then there are a few back numbers still in commission and can be seen flitting about the bays every day when the ice is fit and the winds blow. The principal ones, the "Snow Bird" that for many winters was invincible, until the "Witch" came, and the "Rover", the "Antelope," the "Alert," and the old Barnhart Boat, of Deseronto, and a few others not so classy as those named.

The Club held its first race (since the winter of 1907) in Hay Bay, on Wednesday, Feb. 1st, and were fortunate in having good ice and a cracking fine wind, so that reefing was the order of the day. The following yachts lined up for the start, and finished in the order named :

1st, the "Witch," Tom Tierney, Skipper.

2nd, the "Falcon," M. B. Mills, skipper.

3rd, the "Whistler," Morley Galt, skipper.

Two others also ran, but on account of their smaller size, were quite out-classed. The race between the Witch and Falcon was well worth going miles to see, as they hung together throughout the entire race, the Falcon crossed the line ahead on the first circuit, but lost her advantage, owing to a misunderstanding, and was beaten home by but a few seconds.

Another race will be sailed on Deseronto Bay on Saturday afternoon next, Feb. 4th, if the ice and weather permit.

Meet us at Paul's Bookstore,
Any Saturday afternoon,
We will show you our pianos
Of different make and tune.

We have the Gerhard Heintzman,
The Newcombe and some more,
That can give the sweetest music,
This side of the other shore.

We will deal with you for anything,
Under the sun or moon,
So just for your own sake,
You cannot deal too soon.

We have been dealing in pianos,
For fourteen years or more,
And many a satisfied customer
Is now on the other shore.

But some are left to share
The best of music here,
And to thank VanLuvén Bros.
For not being very dear.

We also have some other lines,
For the living and the dead,
And will thank you for your custom,
That is what we always said.
